LEAGUE SURRENDER OUTRAGES SMALL POWERS

MAY INSIST ON STRONG ACTION RESENT DICTATION OF BIG NATIONS COUNCIL TO BECOME RUBBER STAMP?

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1934. Received, Aug. 6, 10 a.m.)

Geneva, Aug. 5.

The small nations, comprising the bulk of the League of Nations membership, are outraged at the Italo-Ethiopian compromise arrangement, which is privately termed a weak surrender, dictated by the British, French and Italian influence, instead of by the League as a whole.

It is indicated that unless the issue is settled before the League Assembly meets on September 9, the small nations will force the issue, insisting upon a declaration as to whether the League is to become a real League of Nations or a rubber stamp approving the decisions of the major powers.

The South American, Eastern European and Scandinavian representatives are inclined to demand that the League assert its authority to prevent Italy declaring war, regardless of the consequences to the League's future.—United Press.

Addis Ababa, August 5.
Publication of the League of Nations' compromise resolution, continuing the session of the Arbitration Commission in an attempt to find a solution of the Italo-Abyssinian dispute, has only served to deepen the general depression caused here by earlier reports of proceedings.

It is pointed out that during the intervening weeks, between the present moment and the date on which arbitration must be concluded, Italy can press on with her war preparations.

Abyssinia is worried over the absence of an Italian declaration that she won't resort to force before the arbitration proceedings are at an end, a high Government official declares.

Every day that passes without such a definite declaration enabled the Italians the better to prepare the way for their much-heralded offensive against Abyssinia, he said. "Meanwhile," the spokesman went on, "we loyally accept the League's proposals. But we are beginning to wonder whether the advocacy of the League is so great a benefit as it has been made out to be."

ONE CONSOLATION

However, the second part of the resolution, which takes the dispute out of the arbitrators' hands in the event of failure and makes the League itself responsible, fully satisfies the Abyssinian Government. Abyssinia, the spokesman points out, has not ceased to demand the examination of the whole affair by the League during the past eight months.—Reuter.

ABYSSINIA'S THANKS

Geneva, Aug. 5.
The League of Nations has received a telegram from the Emperor of Abyssinia thanking the Council for its efforts to maintain peace in Africa.

The Emperor adds that Abyssinia is firmly resolved to reach a peaceful solution and trusts that the efforts of the League for peace will continue to be successful.—Reuter.

ARMS FROM JAPAN

London, Aug. 5.
The Exchange Telegraph reports from Addis Ababa that Ethiopia has contracted to purchase "very large" consignments of armaments from Japan.—United Press.

JAPANESE ARMS DENIAL

Tokyo, Aug. 5.
The Foreign Office declares that the report that Abyssinia has signed a contract with Japan for the supply of arms and ammunition is without foundation. "The Japanese Government," it adds, "has no intention of supplying arms to Abyssinia."

COSTLY REVOLT IN CRETE

TROOPS CONTROL SITUATION

THREE KNOWN KILLED

(Special to "Telegraph")

Athens, August 5.

The Government has received a message from General Baco-poulos, in charge of the Government forces in Crete, stating that order has been restored and that the strikers are now dispersing peacefully.

But the revolt in Candia, led by labour radicals and joined by Liberal sympathisers and friends of the exiled Greek king, Venizelos, cost several lives, a large number of wounded and immense property loss.

General Baco-poulos states further that his forces have surrounded Candia and that he has demanded the submission of the strikers. He had received deputations and had heard their claims.

Later the strikers capitulated. It is believed that the total casualties of the affray are three killed and 20 wounded on the side of the insurgents, and 17 men of the Government forces wounded.

A large amount of damage was done in Candia when the strikers and their allies seized public buildings and set about sacking them in their anger.—Reuter Special.

CASUALTY REPORT

Athens, Aug. 5.

The casualties in the disturbances in Crete are now stated to be six killed and 40 wounded. The trouble reached a head when 4,000 strikers sacked the administrative buildings in Candia. The striking Director of the Royal Observatory, Mr. B. D.

His Holiness the Pope, who, receiving young German Catholics at the Vatican yesterday, referred to the "modern paganism" and persecution of Catholics in Germany.

MODERN GERMAN PAGANISM

MESSAGE TO CATHOLICS

(Special to "Telegraph")

Vatican City, Aug. 5.

His Holiness the Pope today spoke on "modern paganism" and the persecution of the Roman Catholics in Germany when he received a group of young German Catholics at the Vatican.

It was a sad thing for him to think of the struggle maintained against God and Christ, said His Holiness, in this modern campaign of paganism.

On the other hand it was a joyful thing to think that in Germany there were so many young men who were pious and strong in their faith.

"Never lose courage," he said. "Be ready and strong in your faith and confident in God."—Reuter Special.

The United Press adds that Pope Pius addressed fifty German pilgrims who visited the Vatican. He blessed all the Catholic Germans who were "so gallantly battling in defence of their faith in the present difficult times."

"But harder times may come," he added.

Two Typhoons Or Only One?

POSSIBLE THREAT TO COLONY

Whilst the Manila Observatory reports two typhoons today, the Hongkong Observatory adheres to its view that there is only one centre, this being off Swatow, less than 300 miles from Hongkong.

The Manila Observatory, reporting at 8.45 a.m. today, states that the typhoon which has formed to the west of the Bashi Channel is now situated in about 118 Long, 21 Lat., moving W.N.W. This is north-east of the Pratas, less than 300 miles from Hongkong, and if it continues on its present course it should pass close to the Colony.

Another typhoon, according to the Manila Observatory, is in about 118 Long, 24 Lat., moving west. This position is east of Amoy, which is accordingly threatened. The acting Director of the Royal Observatory, Mr. B. D.

Britain's Sporting Holiday

HUGE CROWDS AT CRICKET GAMES

ENDEAVOUR WINS RACE

London, Aug. 5.

It has been a real "Bank" holiday for the county cricket clubs, which have greatly benefited from the large attendances at to-day's matches.

Official figures show that over 100,000 attended nine matches, 27,000 of whom watched the annual Battle of the Roses at Bradford while there were 20,000 at the Kennington Oval for the Surrey v. Notts. match, and 17,000 gathered at Swansea, where the South Africans captured the imagination, even the football grandstand being filled. Only the Australian teams in 1921 and 1926 drew equal gates. At Eastbourne, Harvard and Yale

GERMANY FEARS UNREST

"AGITATORS ARE AT WORK"

PEOPLE ARE WARNED

(Special to "Telegraph")

Berlin, August 5.

Flaming pink posters, ten feet high, are plastered all over this city in the latest move of a campaign against the opponents of the Nazi regime.

The posters shout:

"German People, listen!

"Agitators are at work.

"Beware of the underworld men who come to you in sheep's clothing, but who within are ravening wolves."

Squads of Storm Troops in lorries paraded through the streets of the city at night shouting slogans against the opponents of Nazism.

There is considerable unrest.—Reuter Special.

Church Wine Poisoned

ITALIAN PRIEST STRICKEN

MYSTERIOUS CRIME

(Special to "Telegraph")

Cremona, August 5.

The police here are investigating a mysterious crime in the Church of St. Augustine.

Monsignor Stuan, when celebrating mass, drank a little of the Communion wine and fell to the altar steps terribly burned about the mouth and stomach.

The Vicar, who also tasted the wine, was likewise burned, and an analysis revealed that there was a quantity of sulphuric acid in the goblet.

There is hope of saving Monsignor Stuan's life and meanwhile the authorities are bending every effort to solve the puzzle.

The trial has just been concluded at Spoleto of a similar case in which the parish priest was poisoned with strychnine and later died. Two accused men received heavy prison sentences.—Reuter Special.

JAPAN PROTEST DELIVERED

INSULTING CARTOON RESENTED

WASHINGTON CAUTIOUS IN REPLY

Washington, Aug. 5.

The Japanese Ambassador, Mr. Saito, has made representations to the State Department regarding the cartoon which appeared in a recent issue of Vanity Fair, depicting the Japanese Emperor pulling a gun-carriage on which was mounted a scroll of the Nobel Peace Prize under the caption, "Unlikely Historical Situations."

The Ambassador declared that the cartoon was derogatory to the Emperor and to the Japanese people, and the Japanese people felt the insult keenly.

Replying to the Japanese protest, Mr. Cordell Hull, the Secretary of State, said he regretted the incident but pointed out that the Government exercised no censorship upon the press and was in no way responsible for anything published.

"The Emperor ought to see some of the others I have done and am doing," said William Cropper, the originator of the cartoon. "Several countries, including Germany, have outlawed publications using my work. I am grateful to Japan for giving 'class' to my list of objects to my work which now consists of one Labour leader, several capitalists and one Emperor," he smiled.—Reuter.

AMERICAN REGRET

Washington, August 5.

The Japanese Ambassador made informal representations to Mr. Cordell Hull in respect of the Vanity Fair caricature, and left the State Department apparently satisfied, believing he had obtained a direct expression of regret. However, it is understood that the Secretary of State avoided a direct expression of regret, and only cautiously said that he was sorry that the cartoon had been misunderstood in Japan.

The State Department has issued a statement, saying: "The Secretary of State in reply to representations relative to material in the current issue of a periodical referred to a reported statement of public denial (supposedly by the periodical) saying there was no intention of giving offence."

"The Secretary of State said he was always sorry when incidents were taken amiss."

The artist concerned, William Gropper, who is regularly employed on a Communist newspaper, said he intended to continue "to inveigh against Japanese imperialism regardless of Japanese feeling."

HUEY LONG AROUSED

Senator Huey Long, the Louisiana radical, contributed to the quarrel, saying: "I agree we gotta stop cartoonists. But if the Emperor control 'em he's a better man than we."

"I'll move that Tokyo apply for citizenship."—United Press.

Tax-The-Rich Bill Passes

BUT ONLY UP TO SENATE

Washington, August 5.

The House of Representatives today passed, by a vote of 282 to 96, President Roosevelt's Tax-the-Rich Bill.

The measure increases the taxation on incomes of over $50,000 annually.

The Bill now goes to the Senate where it is expected it will have a very stormy session; for there is strong opposition to it there.

It is estimated that when passed the Bill will make possible the addition of between $250,000,000 and $270,000,000 to the federal revenue.—Reuter.

Stratosphere Plane Crash

PILOT BURNED TO DEATH

Paris, Aug. 5.

France's only stratosphere plane crashed in flames near Bonnières today, the pilot, M. Cagno, being incinerated.

The machine had only recently been completed, being tested at 33,000 feet. It had only been in the air an hour and a quarter when it burst into flames.

It is believed that the pilot was overcome in the rarefied atmosphere encountered in the great height attained.—Reuter.

Mauretania Souvenir Hunters

CABINS RANSACKED
BY 10,000

INSPECTION TO BE CURTAILED

Remarkable scenes were witnessed at Rosyth Dockyard, when it was estimated that 10,000 of a 20,000 crowd inspected the Mauretania, for 22 years holder of the Blue Riband of the Atlantic, and shortly to be broken up.

Unfortunately, the inauguration of a week's public inspection had regrettable results. A number of the visitors, apparently souvenir-hunters, did damage to the liner's fittings, and it has been decided to curtail the facilities to sight-seers. Notices prohibiting smoking, too, were sometimes disregarded, and there were several fire alarms, which, luckily, proved to be false.

Seven o'clock in the morning, exactly three days after her arrival at Rosyth, the Mauretania was taken from the large lock, and through the open dock to her berth beside the Bayern, the German battleship which was towed from Scapa Flow to the Firth, up-side down.

While it has been held up in the lock, thus imprisoning the tugs which are necessary to manoeuvre it into difficult positions, the liner has cost Metal Industries (Ltd.) about £100 a day.

The process of berthing one of the biggest (if not the biggest) marine visitors to Rosyth, was carried out in ideal weather without a single hitch.

As a considerable number of their employees have not joined in the strike at the shipbreaking yard Metal Industries (Ltd.) had a sufficient staff at their disposal to perform the task.

The Mauretania had not been long in the dock, and the gangway had not been placed in position, when the first sightseers queued up at the dockyard gates. The liner is to be open to public inspection for a week, and the proceeds of the admission charges are being devoted to charities.

£375 FOR CHARITIES

For eleven hours, from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., there was a continuous stream of visitors, and the dockyard was transformed into a gigantic parking place accommodating hundreds of motor cars and omnibuses from all parts of the country.

At no time during the day did the queue at the dockside number less than a thousand, and there was a continual coming and going up and down the gangways.

Many of the visitors sunned themselves on the deck chairs on the promenade decks, while entreprising small boys were to be seen swarming up the masts and rigging.

By four o'clock in the afternoon, 6,000 persons had visited the ship. The total number admitted during the day was 10,000. The drawings, at the rate of 1s. for adults and 6d. for juveniles, amounted to £375. Altogether, it is estimated that over 20,000 people visited the dockyard.

HYMNARIES DISAPPEAR

It is needless to say that the vast majority of the visitors conducted themselves in exemplary fashion. A number, who gave the impression of being souvenir hunters, however, ransacked the cabins and did considerable damage to panelling, woodwork, generally, ropes, and nuts and bolts.

A box of hymnaries, too, one of

MAN ALIVE!

UNCONSCIOUS MECHANIC THOUGHT
DEAD

Vienna. George Oosliceanu, 32 Mechanic, ran away from his own post-mortem operation and is in hospital, a despatch Galatz, Roumania, reports.

Knocked out in a fight, Oosliceanu was placed as dead in Galatz Morgue, and was transferred to the dissecting room of the Anatomical Institute for an operation to determine the exact nature of his injuries so his assailants could be tried.

Just before the surgeon began to cut, Oosliceanu jumped up from the table and ran. He was recaptured in the street and taken to the hospital.—United Press.

the sightseers said, almost disappeared.

Hundreds, too, ignored notices prohibiting smoking, and as a result of the careless throwing away of cigarette ends and matches, there were several alarms of fire during the day.

Many amateur photographers were disappointed to find a notice posted at the dockyard gates to the effect that all cameras must be left at the police office.

An official of the firm told The Evening Dispatch that any little thing some of the people could lay their hands on was taken away.

"It was a case of pulling things off here and there," he said, "and the result is that a fair amount of damage has been done to the liner—at least to the amount of £100. The whole thing is ridiculous. A minority on the first day have thus spoiled everyone else who is to visit the Mauretania."

The upshot is, Metal Industries (Ltd.) state, that owing to the damage done to the fittings of the ship they regret that it will be necessary to curtail considerably the privileges extended to the public.

British Girl Star After One Film

PENELOPE WARD

After only one venture in film acting Penelope Dudley Ward is to become a star. She has been given the leading feminine role in "Natacha," which London Film Productions are making at Worton Hall, near Isleworth.

Miss Ward, who is 20, made her debut with Elisabeth Bergner in "Escape Me Never."

She had wanted to break into films since the age of 15, and was determined to take the first opportunity offered to her.

School in London, however, was followed by travelling to various countries to learn the languages. A two years' stay in Germany was followed by six months in Paris and three in Italy.

Upon her return to London she quickly attracted attention, and received an offer to play in a British film. A few days before she was due to take up this part she had to be operated on for appendicitis, another long delay being inevitable.

When she had recovered, Dr. Paul Canner unexpectedly offered her a part in "Escape Me Never," which he was directing, with his wife, Elisabeth Bergner.

CRUELTY IN FILMS

The Earl of Athlone deplored the cruelty used in the taking of some animal films when he presided at a meeting in London of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds.

"Films have sometimes been exhibited," he said, "which, while purporting to show wild life, were in fact produced under unnatural conditions, the animals being herded together to make a sensational 'shoot'."

"I am glad to know of the important action recently taken by the British Board of Film Censors in forming a consultative committee for the scrutiny of animal films."

FILM LIFE OF BANDIT

Gaumont-British are to make a film based on the life of Spada, the Corsican bandit, who was executed recently.

It is announced by Gaumont-British that the film will not be a glorification of banditry but a biographical document based on information left by Spada before he died.

RAFT IN BRITISH FILM

George Raft, states a Hollywood message, is to play the part of an international gangster in a film to be made in England by Count Alfredo Carpegna.

Count Carpegna is associated with the Seven Seas Film Corporation, and the report states that the film would be produced with the collaboration of Alexander Korda.

COLLEEN MOORE'S DIVORCE

Colleen Moore, the film actress, was granted at Los Angeles a divorce from her husband, Mr. Albert Parker Scott, a New York broker, on the ground that he had been harsh and jealous, and had "systematically avoided her." Mr. Scott denied the charges (says Reuter).

Colleen Moore, who is 33, married Mr. Scott in 1932.

Attractive all-expense tours at very low cost have been arranged to provide happy combinations of rail trips overland and steamship cruises across the Lakes, with leisurely stop-over at famous vacation resorts. There is a nine-day westbound tour between Toronto and Winnipeg and a ten-day eastbound tour from Winnipeg to Niagara Falls, with return trip in both cases.

CONSTRUCTION OF CRUISERS

SENATE'S REPORT

By RONALD G. VAN TINE, United Press Staff Correspondent, Washington.

Construction of cruisers apparently costs the Government from one to two million dollars more in private yards than in Navy yards, the Senate Munitions Committee reports.

Making another preliminary report of its extensive investigation of Naval construction contracts, the committee headed by Senator, Gerald P. Nye recommended passage of four pending bills. One is designed to prevent collusion in bidding, another to safeguard government military secrets, another to make public activities of shipbuilding lobbyists, and the fourth to prevent profiteering on naval construction.

The 400-page preliminary report listed these general "findings":

1. Some shipbuilders "are certainly not above suspicion of willingness to wave the flag or to circulate war scares in the plain and simple interest of their own pocket-books, regardless of results."
2. Builders should be "definitely policed in any and all moves made by them or through them to confuse public defence needs with their private profits, or they should be cut off entirely from the building of ships for the Navy."
3. Indications are that private yards cost the government from one to two million dollars more per cruiser than Navy yards.
4. The Navy is left at the mercy of shipbuilders in bids on construction.
5. Naval officials make no attempt to determine whether profit limitations set up in the Vinson-Trammell Act are enforced or evaded.
6. If there is no collusion in bidding, "there was a sympathetic understanding among the big companies of each other's desires," and if there were no conversations about bidding among them, "there was telepathy."

PRICES RAISED

7. Shipbuilders "know that the Navy feels it has to have the ships, and they raise the prices."

8. Opposition of private companies to Navy yard construction has been intense.

9. There are "indications of the use by the Navy of the shipbuilders as a lobby for its interests."

10. There is "a clear and definite danger in allowing self-interested groups, such as the shipbuilders and their allied interests, to be in a position of influence, as they are at present, to such an important instrument of national policy as the Navy."

11. There has been "a large amount of bipartisan political activity on the part of the shipbuilders locally, in Congress, and also at the National Headquarters of the two parties."

12. National defence should be "above and separated from lobbying," and "speculators and speculating" should have no part in it.

13. The Vinson-Trammell profits limitations cannot be enforced without

BI-SEXUAL TREATMENT

SCIENCE MAKES FURTHER PROGRESS

San Francisco. Strides of science in aiding persons with both male and female characteristics drew discussion at the recent convention of the American Urological Association.

The most complete report ever presented by an American on the subject was placed before the Convention by Dr. Hugh Hampton Young, noted lecturer of Johns Hopkins University.

An amazing story—highlights of unusual cases histories—comprised the text of Dr. Young's report.

Pointing out that in border-line sex cases there usually is a leaning toward one, Dr. Young told how plastic surgery has been employed to aid unfortunate bisexuals, in many cases eliminating the characteristics of the subordinate sex and developing the dominant.

He recited the case of an 18-year old football player who applied for surgical assistance. Fifty physicians who studied the case discovered the youth to be exactly midway between male and female. His sex could have been established either as male or female by the proper surgical treatment. Finally, after much discussion and a ballot among the consulting doctors, it was decided to destroy the female characteristics and transform him into a normal, healthy man.

The 64-year old surgeon who pioneered in the field of definite sex establishment said in many cases more than a dozen operations, performed over a period of years, were necessary to obtain desired results.

He said sex of a normal child is determined about six weeks after conception, but in abnormal cases the determination is delayed and sometimes never definitely established.—United Press.

out a huge police force of accountants.

14. The record of private shipbuilders during the war was "close to being disgraceful."

Fresh from her trip to the Far East, Almes Sample McPherson took time out from the welcoming ceremonies to Angeles Temple, Los Angeles, to also deny rumours of her engagement to Homer Rodeheaver. She is shown with Rhea Crawford (left), in charge of the temple while she was away.

AMUSING APPLICATIONS FOR LABELS

"NUDIST'S WHISKY"

By FREDERICK C. OTHMAN

Washington. One distiller who insists on puns, another who hopes to cater to nudists and a third who has his own ideas about the relationship of lovely ladies to strong drink, indicate the type of problems which the Federal Alcohol Administration must solve.

These problems, and similar ones, keep the F.A.C.A. busy, even though it lost most of its power when the Supreme Court clipped the Blue Eagle's wings. The Administration still is giving advice about labels to any liquor manufacturer who applies.

The latest applicant, the punster, wants to make Last gin green. He said that since gin is red, like a traffic light. His gin is green, also like a traffic light. Hence he wants to call it "Last".

The experts got the idea, all right, and even now are deciding whether Americans shall have the opportunity to buy their fast gin green.

Whisky for nudists apparently is ordinary whisky in a bottle to which is affixed a beautiful silver label, upon which is perched a plump and unclothed lady. Above her head is a sign which says "Nudist's Whisky." The F.A.C.A. told the nudist whisky makers to put some clothes on their lady.

Another whisky maker wrote Director Joseph H. Choate from Kentucky, saying he wanted to make "Dream" whisky. The label indicated that the dream concerned wine, women and horse racing, not song. It was red and gold with pictures of a wine glass, a nude girl and a thoroughbred winning a race. The F.A.C.A. said it didn't like that one, either.

"ROOSEVELT BOURBON"

Neither would it approve a whisky labelled F.D.R., particularly when its distillers said they couldn't remember why they had picked those particular initials.

One of their competitors wanted to make Roosevelt bourbon and another was ready to manufacture Abraham Lincoln rye. They also were turned down. Nor would the officials approve Congress whisky on the theory that customers might think it was the favourite tipple of Congressmen.

Another manufacturer is advertising by means of double entendre hardly suitable for a family newspaper, a cocktail of amazing attributes. The F.A.C.A. says it will crack down on him as soon as Congress restores its crack-down power.

The label division so far has received 36,892 applications for labels, and has acted upon 22,708, approving most of them with modifications. All the approved labels are on file, filling one large room and indicating that it is tougher to name a whisky than a pullman car.—United Press.

MARKET UPWARD YESTERDAY

New York, Aug. 5.
The following reports on the New York Stock market have been received through Messrs. Swan, Culbertson & Fritz:

The Wall Street Journal report on yesterday's market: "Utility shares were upward in today's stock exchange and there was a heavy turnover in this section of the market. Oil shares were also higher, but there was a moderate amount of profit taking in steel and rail. Stocks on the curb exchange were higher, being led by utilities. Bonds were irregularly higher."

S. C. & F. New York office cables: The general list was moderately lower, although oil shares and utilities were strong. The earnings of the Phillips Petroleum Company for the six months ending June 30 were $1.21 per share as against 60 cents per share for the same period last year. The Union Pacific Railroad earned 68 cents per share for a similar period as against $2.03 cents per share last year. Steel mill activity during the past week is estimated at 46.0 per cent of capacity, as against 44.0 per cent for the previous week.

New York and Chicago commodity reports received through Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz:

Cotton: An average of various private estimates indicates a crop of around 11,305,000 bales. Trade is dormant, pending the forthcoming Government crop report and the expected loan announcement.
Wheat: There was a feeling of

GARETH JONES TAKEN OVER JEHOI BORDER

Poiping, August 5.
It is reliably reported that Mr. Gareth Jones, the young British journalist captured by brigands near Dolonor, has now been taken across the border into Jehoi by his captors, but the emissaries of the Chinghai Government are still in contact with the brigands, and the Chinese authorities are confident that they will get Mr. Jones released before very long now.—Reuter.

strength on the mill markets early today on poor threshing returns. Professional traders bought and the visible supply has been increased by 5,025,000 bushels. Some late selling was experienced prior to the close of the market.

Corn: The growing crop continues to progress, but there has been a visible decrease in available supplies of 185,000 bushels. The discount for December option under September is considered to be excessive.

Rubber: To-day's market was without any particular feature.

Sugar: The market was dull and featureless, with prices retaining their steadiness.

JAPANESE BUDGET

CONFERENCE TO BEGIN ON

Tokyo, Aug. 6.
Mr. Takahashi, Finance Minister, will begin budget conference with members of the Cabinet on Friday. He is hoping to reduce the total however, but it is pointed out that new enterprises will probably reach upwards of 1,200,000 yen; making a reduction to under 34,000,000 yen impossible.—United Press.

PLANNED NATIONAL FINANCE

One of the proposals in Mr. Lloyd George's New Deal plans is that the Bank of England should be placed under the control of a board representing the financial, industrial and commercial relations of the nation. In this respect, the Lloyd George scheme differs from the Labour ideal, which is that the Bank should be completely nationalised. Actually, the Bank of England is a private institution—the only important bank of its kind which has no form of Government control—and one of its most important functions is to control the supply of money in the country. By its control of the bank rate, and in other ways, it determines the amount of money which shall be available to finance business developments. That is a very great power, and there are many who believe that it ought not to be in the hands of a private institution. For the people as a whole, money is not something to be loaned out at a profit; it is the wherewithal to buy the necessities of life. If money is kept scarce, the people cannot buy, and when they cannot buy, other people cannot sell. The result may well be—as is the case nowadays—that although mechanical and scientific achievements are such that the country can produce an increasing number of things which everybody wants, they cannot be distributed to the extent that they should, and the industrial machine accordingly breaks down. The joint stock banks also play their part in this money business. Not only do they decide which industries shall have credit, but they can, as the Macmillan Committee showed, owing to the large amount of business done by cheques, create credit to ten times the amount of cash deposited with them. They can only do this, however, because of the credit and character of the nation as a whole; yet it is often difficult for legitimate sound business concerns, particularly small ones, to obtain the credit they desire, although huge sums are often available for out-and-out speculators. There is an increasing need that the interests of sound industry should come first, and undue speculation be made impossible. To a recognition of this point, the Government has been urged.

NOTES OF THE DAY

EPIDEMICS

The Health Organisation of the League of Nations has just published some interesting information regarding the influenza epidemic of the early part of this year. These surveys published by the Health Organisation are of very considerable value to doctors and public health authorities in their studies of epidemics and the means of controlling them. When one remembers how many hundreds of thousands, and even sometimes millions of people may lose their lives in great epidemics of worldwide dimensions, one realises how necessary it is to encourage medical and scientific research in regard to such problems. The report of the Health Organisation regarding the latest influenza epidemic states that the form of the influenza was unusually mild. It appears to have been more severe in Germany than in most European countries. The number of deaths reported in the great towns is comparable with that recorded in the winter of 1930-31, when the last severe epidemic occurred. In France, we are told, influenza spread to all parts of the country, but the deaths which occurred were mainly amongst people of advanced age, as is usually the case in relatively mild epidemics. The disease took on an exceptionally mild form in Great Britain. In the United States the disease was four to five times more prevalent in 1935 than last year, but the mortality rate was fortunately low. This work of the League, which goes on unknown to the masses, is for the world's good and deserves support and recognition.

WHAT PROTECTION

When Mr. Baldwin announced the National Government's policy of trebling the Air Force, he expressed a hope that there would be no profiteering in connection with the construction of the additional aeroplanes. But he did not say what steps the Government proposed to take to prevent profiteering. On June 26, Dr. Addison asked the Secretary of State for Air what instructions and powers had been given to those appointed to safeguard public interests in regard to the prices to be paid for aircraft supplies. Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister replied that the Government had appointed Sir Hardman Lever, Mr. P. Ashley Cooper, and Mr. H. C. Judd to "advise" him in this matter, but that no instructions were necessary. Pressed by Dr. Addison to say what powers these gentlemen would have, the Minister said he did not think any special powers were needed at the present time. "I absolutely refuse to accept the suggestion," he said, "that the country and I are not going to be met in a reasonable way by the industry of this country, until the contrary has been proved."

WHAT DEALERS THINK

Meanwhile, what the dealers in aeroplane shares think about the effect of the Government's expansion policy can be seen from the following news item which appears in the Daily Telegraph on June 7: "Yesterday's Stock Exchange session was a sensational, and rather unedifying, rush to acquire the newly-introduced 10s. Ordinary Shares of the Bristol Aeroplane Company. These shares were purchased by a leading firm of stockbrokers on the basis of 87s. 6d. Yesterday, on their first day of quotation, they actually touched 57s. 6d. before closing at 56s. 3d." The City Editor of the Daily Telegraph commented that this rise in the share prices was "in unfortunate contrast to the stand which the Government has taken against profiteering in the aircraft industry," but he admitted that the shares in question "were not altogether inaccurately assessed by the vendors and the broking house." He concluded, with a warning to investors to beware against "being led into a dangerous market by the glamour shed upon aircraft shares by the recent Government decision to increase the Royal Air Force."

for the creation of a National Investment Board, under Government aegis, to make finance the true servant of the nation. In short, reformers, including Mr. Lloyd George and the Labour Party, seek nationally-planned and controlled finance, to ensure that as the nation's ability to produce increases, so shall consuming power rise to enable everyone to benefit from the industrial advance. Whether it is possible to secure a realisation of this ideal remains to be seen, but the importance of the subject is beyond dispute.

HOW TO KEEP COOL IN ENGLAND!

By DR. BETTY MORGAN

THERE are many different theories about the best way to do it. Down in Devonshire the country people have a saying that what keeps out the cold keeps out the heat. According to this idea, we should all muffle ourselves up in great coats when the thermometer takes a leap upward. After all, in very hot countries, the natives are inclined to act that way.

The Indian envelops his head in the voluminous folds of a turban. The Arab wears his heavy white burnous in the scorching heat of the desert day and the biting cold of the desert night.

It may even be that the city clerk who wears his navy blue suit in July and January alike does not suffer any more from the heat than the bathing beauty who lies for hours in the sun with the irreducible minimum of covering.

Always providing that the city clerk does not wear a tight collar. There, at least, is one fairly safe rule for hot weather, and none the less convincing because it might equally well apply to cold weather.

We are only just beginning to realise that the production of ideal heat and ideal cold both depend to a large extent upon the free circulation of air. Cellular blankets are warmer than the solid variety. An open neck in winter is often more warming than a muffler. And if it is true that a fire thrives on air it is also true that refrigerators never work properly unless there is ample ventilation above and around them.

So, if we want to keep cool, we must allow for the free passage of air around our bodies. We should never wear anything tight about the neck, waist, and feet. A tight shoe, most of us will painfully realise, is a hot shoe, whatever the weather. As long as our summer clothes are loose, the material of which they are made is of secondary importance.

After the problem of what to wear the problem of what to drink is the main preoccupation of hot summer afternoons.

There are two schools of thought upon this subject. One believes that we should fight heat with heat—eat curry, drink hot tea, have hot baths. For myself, I decide against the curry and the hot baths, but have not the least hesitation in recommending hot tea with lemon in it as the most cooling of all summer drinks.

Ices and ice drinks have a nasty habit of warming you up later. They stimulate your inside much as a cold bath stimulates your outside.

On the subject of baths, earnest experiment convinces me that the ideal bath for a sweltering day is neither hot nor cold, but tepid. This is a personal discovery, which I pass on for what it may be worth. If you are very hot, and there is no bath available, it is a good plan to run tepid water from a tap over the wrists.

As for exercise: I have never understood why the laws of convention demand that we should play really strenuous games like tennis in the full blaze of a summer sun. All sane human instincts are against excessive exercise in the heat. The best advice for holiday-makers is to take it easy.

day-makers in a heat-wave is to take things slowly. Summer days were meant for short spells in the sunlight and longer spells in the shade. And both spells should be easy.

If you happen to find yourself unbearably hot, and have neither a tepid bath to drop into, nor a cool bed to lie upon, the only thing to do is to find a spot of shade and to sit in it, quite still, for at least half an hour.

Sea-bathing as a means of keeping cool can be overdone. Except for special cases (principally people with weak hearts), nothing is healthier than a sea-bath on a sunny day, providing:

1. That you don't stay in too long.

2. That you don't let the sun beat down upon your unprotected head.

3. That you don't exercise yourself beyond your real strength.

4. That you don't lie about in the sun for hours, immediately after coming out of the sea, unless you have really acclimatised yourself to it.

Few things can be more unpleasant than a sunstroke after a sea-bath, and hardly anything can be so thoroughly enfeebling as an overdose of the briny.

Thanks to persistent newspaper and wireless propaganda, most people now have a fairly good idea of how to behave in hot weather—what to eat, what to wear, how to treat the sun, and when to exercise.

When it comes to the actual cooling of houses, however, there is still a great deal to be done, both in theory and in practice. Seeing that human beings are unfortunately unable to order a cool breeze every time the house gets hot and stuffy, the only sensible solution is an electric fan. Indeed, it is high time that architects provided houses with electric fans as part of their normal equipment.

They are just as important in the dog days as central heating is in the cold of January. Meantime, there is still a lot to be said for the ordinary fan. As an addition to the amenities of our bathing-benches the fan has distinct possibilities. Anyone who doubts that may consider the following extract from a letter written by Benjamin Disraeli in Spain to his mother in England during the hot summer of 1830:

"The fan is the most wonderful part of the whole scene. A Spanish lady with her fan might shame the tactics of a whole troop of horse. Now she unfurls it with the slow pomp and conscious elegance of a peacock. Now she flutters it with all the languor of a listless beauty, now with all the liveliness of a vivacious one. . . . You know that it speaks a particular language and gallantry requires no other mode to express its most subtle conceits or its most unreasonable demands than this slight, delicate organ."

"I can't afford it," confessed Pete. "Besides, it wouldn't be fair to the people in Hongkong. I already owe money to you. Why do you know I owe money to half the tradespeople in the Colony?"

"I know, I know," replied his wife impatiently, "but surely you also owe something to the Lord." "I know that," replied Pete frankly, "but the Lord isn't pressing me like the rest of my creditors."

The Very Idea!

SENSE OR NONSENSE

It's All The Same To This Unconscious Humourist

By Eddie "Ratbag" Kelly

HOW would you like to earn $2,500 in the newspaper game like Edward Kelly or some other big journalist? You would, wouldn't you? Well, so would Kelly.

Become a humourist. It will serve you right.

There are only a few simple rules to follow. If you follow them there's no telling where you'll end up. Maybe in gaol, who knows?

One of the easiest ways of breaking into a newspaper office is to use a burglar's outfit.

Another way is through the use of expensive gifts. This may fail, but there's no harm in trying. Besides, who hasn't failed since the dollar rose? Anyway, send around a Rolls Royce or Chrysler to Eddie Kelly with your card in it. Tell him you can write funny stuff. You may get a job right away if there's an opening. If there's not, keep on sending the expensive gifts.

One of the best ways we've ever heard of is the sincerity way. Sincerity is the big thing in becoming a successful journalist. With sincerity you can get anywhere. But, of course, you've got to have courage too. Sincerity without courage will get you nowhere, especially with some Editors we know.

Still, sincerity and courage without faith will do you no good either. You might as well give up. That's it—sincerity, courage, faith and, of course, hope. Hope is the big thing.

But who ever heard of Faith and Hope without Charity? So we would suggest sincerity, faith, hope, courage and charity.

But where can you get on charity? "You've got to have money," Sincerity, faith, hope, courage, charity and money. Yes, with money you can get anywhere, even in newspaper work. All you have to do is buy your own newspaper.

Forgive Us Our Debts

Believe it or not, we went to Church last Sunday. With Pete Whaletooth. It was the anniversary of his wedding, or something, and his headache had insisted that he go along. As we were dragged into the party, too.

When the collection plate was passed, old Pete kept his eyes on the ceiling.

"I should think you'd be ashamed of yourself, Pete," said Mrs. W. after the service. "You didn't put a thing in the collection plate."

"I can't afford it," confessed Pete. "Besides, it wouldn't be fair to the people in Hongkong. I already owe money to you. Why do you know I owe money to half the tradespeople in the Colony?"

"I know, I know," replied his wife impatiently, "but surely you also owe something to the Lord." "I know that," replied Pete frankly, "but the Lord isn't pressing me like the rest of my creditors."

Dead

"Well, you must admit that Hongkong is much cleaner than Shanghai," said the Peak resident to the visitor from the north. "Look how well it's laid out."

"It ought to be," retorted the Shanghai resident, "it's been dead for ages."

Ah, Mr. Kelly

Not long ago we met a girl who went in for this Falschmanism, you know, thinking of another word with which you can associate the word or name you want to remember. The best way is to rhyme a word.

When we first met her we were introduced to her as Mr. Kelly. We met her in the street next day.

"How do you do, Mr. Stummlik," she gasped.

Eye'll Say So

"Eyes that send a glad 'Come hither'."

"Eyes that set my pulses a-thriller."

"Eyes that twist 'love' in a caudle."

"Eyes that, too, can scorch and wither."

"Eyes that promise 'I'll be with you'."

"Eyes that make a 'yes' out of a 'no'."

"Eyes that make a 'no' out of a 'yes'."

"Eyes that make a 'yes' out of a 'no'."

"Eyes that make a 'no' out of a 'yes'."

"Eyes that make a 'yes' out of a 'no'."

"Eyes that make a 'no' out of a 'yes'."

"Eyes that make a 'yes' out of a 'no'."

MOTION PICTURE C. S. SUE

STUDIO SECURES JUDGMENT

Judgment was delivered by the Police Judge, Mr. Justice Lindwell, at the Summary Court this morning in the case in which the Motion Picture Studio, of Asia Life Building, claimed $164.50 from the Globe Motion Picture Co., of Aberdeen (H.K.) for work done and material supplied.

His Lordship gave judgment for the plaintiff with costs.

Mr. Peter Sin appeared for the plaintiffs and Mr. F. X. D'Almada for the defendant.

The case for the plaintiffs was that the claim was in respect to photographs taken on behalf of the defendant.

The defence that the money had been paid to one Robert Hall who was an employee of the plaintiff firm.

Giving judgment, His Lordship said: "I am satisfied by the evidence given by the plaintiff that the man Robert Hall was their employee at the material time and had no authority, real or ostensible, to collect payment for the photographs taken by him in his capacity as such employee. The defendants should have been warned by the words printed at the bottom of the bill: 'A separate receipt will be given on payment of this account', and should have demanded such a receipt when they made payment. Had they done that, the true state of affairs would have been disclosed. Their failure to do so has deprived them of all remedy. Judgment for plaintiff for claim with costs."

KAYSER TO DIE

GERMAN COMMUNIST LEADER

Berlin, Aug. 5.
Ex-Kelchtag Deputy Albert Kayser has been sentenced to death by the People's Court of Berlin for high treason.

This is the second time that the People's Court has passed the death sentence.

Four others have been sentenced to terms of penal servitude, ranging from two to fifteen years, and loss of civil rights. Moreover, when they are released they will be placed under police supervision.

The charge against Kayser and his accomplices is that they re-organized the old Communist Party in Central Germany.

For ten months of the year 1933 Kayser was in a concentration camp, but he was released on the understanding that he would refrain from political activity.

One of the accused sentenced to fifteen years imprisonment was the 29 year old Frau Minna Harm.

To See Clearly

Berlin, Aug. 5.
The mystery of the builders' boardings which have suddenly made an appearance in the middle of Wilhelm Strasse on the frontage of the new Reich Chancellery has been solved by the announcement that it has been decided to erect a balcony from which Herr Hitler will in future show himself to the populace instead of from the famous first floor window the view of which is somewhat obscure.

LOSS OF DETONATORS

BIG NUMBER MISSING FROM GREEN ISLAND

The loss of 40,000 detonators from a store in the gunpowder depot on Green Island during the week-end has been reported to the police by Mr. W. H. Bailey, officer-in-charge of the Depot.

Mr. Bailey stated that between 12.40 p.m. on Saturday and 6.40 a.m. on Sunday, the detonators were taken from No. 5 store. Entry was effected by sawing through two iron windows.

The value of the stolen property is not stated in the report.

HWAH PENG SAFE

ARRIVED AT SHUAN CHOW ON SUNDAY

The Hwah Peng, the Chinese steamer which was reported missing from Shanghai since she left on July 27, arrived at her destination, Shuan Chow, near Amoy, shortly after noon on Sunday.

This information was received by the local Naval authorities yesterday morning.

The vessel was due to arrive at Shuan Chow on July 28 and it is believed that she was forced to shelter from the typhoon which was reported to have been raging off the coast.

CANTON-KWANGSI

NEW AIR LINE TO BE INAUGURATED

Canton, August 5.
In view of the growing of passenger and mail traffic on the Canton-Kingchow airway, the South-West Aviation Corporation has decided to increase the number of trips from here to Kingchow, and vice versa.

It is officially announced that from August 15 the present Canton-Kingchow line will be extended to Nanning (Capital of Kwangsi) via Pakhai. There will be a regular air service on every Tuesday and Saturday from here to Nanning, while every Wednesday and Sunday from Nanning to here.

This new arrangement will let the extended line make a junction with the Canton-Lungchow airway at Nanning Station. The General Post Office here has been officially notified of the change of schedule in order to accept airmails.—Wah Kiu Yat Po.

New Aerodrome

Canton, August 5.
The scheme for building a big aerodrome for civil aviation in Honam Island has been approved by Mr. Liu Chi-wen, the Mayor of Canton, according to official circles.

Many complaints have been brought to the Municipal Government Authority because of lack of suitable aerodromes for civil aviation. The local military aerodrome is prohibited for the landing of civil aeroplanes while the aerodrome at Shekpi is not suitable for use, because it is too far away from the business centre of the city. This is the reason for choosing Honam Island as the centre for civil aviation.

It is understood that preliminary works of the building scheme will probably be carried out some time in the middle of next month.—Wah Kiu Yat Po.

ROAD ACCIDENTS

MINOR MISHAPS DURING THE WEEK-END

Three traffic accidents, all of a minor nature, were reported to the Police during the week-end.

Mr. H. P. Joseph was driving private car 1206 in Queen's Road near Queen's Street on Sunday morning when a Chinese man collided with the rear part of the vehicle but was not injured.

Mr. R. B. Wood, residing at 100 Wongmehong Road, has reported to the police that while driving car 2064 at the junction of Island Road and Repulse Bay Road he collided with the wall, causing damage to the bumper, door and running board.

Pau Tak, 18, house cooler employed at I. Humphreys Buildings, was knocked down by a motor lorry while crossing Nathan Road. The lorry driver took him home but it is stated did not report the accident to the police. Pau Tak was brought to the Water Police Station by an Indian constable.

Mrs. Luk, wife of Dr. Luk, of the Kowloon Hospital, was admitted to the hospital yesterday evening, suffering with slight injuries, sustained in a motor car accident on the Tai Po Road last evening.

About 5 p.m. yesterday, Dr. and Mrs. Luk were proceeding in their car, No. 19, along Tai Po Road towards Hongkong. Dr. Luk was driving. Their car came into collision with a lorry, No. 4216 near a small bridge close to Shatin.

The impact was not a heavy one, but Mrs. Luk received injuries through the wind screen glass splintering. A private car, No. 2667, driven by a European whose name is not known to the Police, was passing by, and Mrs. Luk was conveyed in it to the Kowloon Hospital.

The off front wheel of car No. 19 was damaged, and the wind screen broken. The damage to the lorry was, however, very slight.

JAPANESE HELP

ARMAMENTS ORDER REPORT

Addis Ababa, Aug. 5.
Japan is to supply the Abyssinian Army with the latest type of munitions and the Government is signing a contract with Japan for the supply of, "a very big consignment" of arms and ammunition of various types with a view to the modernisation of the army.

At the same time arrangements are almost complete for the despatch of a Japanese Military and Commercial mission here.

The Mandate Problem
The question of a League mandate for Abyssinia has been discussed in important circles in the capital, and it is believed that the circles in question are not unfavourable to a mandate being bestowed on France and Britain, but under no circumstances upon Italy.

Japan and Italy
It will be recalled that on July 19 the Japanese Ambassador in Rome announced that Japan had no intention of intervening in the event of war between Abyssinia and Italy, or in Italy's policy towards that country.

This was followed by an announcement from Tokyo to the effect that the Japanese Government was watching the course of affairs with the greatest interest.

No more was said officially, but this was sufficient to start acrimonious press controversy on both sides, the Japanese papers accusing Italy of Imperialism and breach of the Kellogg pact, while the Italian papers were particularly virulent against Japan, the accusation being that that Power was seeking to assume leadership of all the coloured races of the world.—Reuter.

Turkish Instructor

Angora, August 5.
A Turkish general of the name of Wehbi Pasha is now in Addis Ababa, and has been instructed by the Turkish Government Internal Defence Department to offer his services as official instructor to the Abyssinian Army.—Reuter.

Reaction in Italy

Rome, Aug. 5.
Italy's abstention from voting on the resolution regarding the League Council meeting of September 9 does not mean that she will not attend, and on this matter nothing has yet been decided according to well informed circles, which reiterated that some form of military operation was needed before a settlement could be reached.

The rains which are met with in Italian East Africa at this time of year are stated to be making troop movements difficult.

Meanwhile the Italian newspapers continue to publish articles of Britain's "brutal methods" of colonialism, compared with Italy's humane methods.

The Lavorista di Genoa is asserting that Britain's essential motive is that she wants some time in the future to incorporate Abyssinia in the British Empire.—Reuter.

Alleged Attacks on Missions

Rome, Aug. 5.
Official Italian news agency dispatches received here to-day contain reports of several alleged Ethiopian atrocities which have been perpetrated during the last few days.

The first is the alleged sacking and burning of the French Catholic Mission in the Dubbo Harar district. Another message contains the report of attacks on the Uollamo and Sidamo districts; while a third report states that Mons. J. A. Rousseau, Apostolic Prefect of the Galla district, has been threatened.—United Press.

CHINA'S MONETARY

IMPORTANT ACTION FORESHADOWED

Nanking, Aug. 5.
Any important monetary action taken by the Chinese Government in the future will be decided after a careful study has been made by responsible circles according to information from the quarters concerned.

Such a stand it is understood is intended to dispel rumours afloat nowadays with regard to the reported Government's intention to pursue an inflation policy or other possible monetary acts calculated to stabilise the Chinese currency system.

It has been freely admitted that numerous plans have been discussed by the Coin Monetary experts and influential Chinese trade leaders for the reformation of the Chinese monetary system. The Government responsible circles have asserted that they welcome any proposals, which may tend to stabilise the value of Chinese currency.

With regard to the sending of foreign monetary experts to China to study the monetary conditions here, it is stated that the Chinese Government while taking a deliberate view will not allow any such experts to be sent to study the monetary conditions here.

OFFENDING CANTON

FOREIGN OFFICE SPOKESMAN AND OFFICIAL ATTITUDE

Tokyo, Aug. 5.
A Foreign Office official spokesman categorically denied various statements in the Japanese press purporting to represent his opinion on the Vanity Fair cartoon. "I made no statement whatever," he said.

He also denied that the Foreign Office considered that the magazine's cartoon was more offending than a recent article published in a Shanghai magazine, about the Emperor.

"This is no occasion whatever for making comparisons, hence none have been made," he added.

Asked regarding the report that the Foreign Office had instructed all diplomats abroad carefully to examine newspapers and magazines, the spokesman asked the Japanese correspondent, "Why do you publish such silly things?"

Devotion to Emperor

The Foreign Office spokesman's attitude indicated the belief that many foreign publishers fail to understand the devotion of all Japanese people to the Imperial House. So far, as supplies of the magazine destined for Japan newspapers had not arrived in Tokyo, none had been circulated. However, private subscribers have received their copies.

The publisher, Mr. N. Shields in a statement has said it was never intended to offend. This has been widely published, but officials have not commented thereon.

Asked what results the Foreign Office expected from Mr. Saito's visit to the United States, the spokesman said "I don't know."—United Press.

Protest to be Considered

New York, Aug. 5.
According to a report from Washington, the Japanese Ambassador, Mr. Saito, is unable to say whether he will lodge a formal protest against the caricature, until he has discussed the matter with his staff.

Japanese resentment appears not to be directed against the joke about the Peace Prize, but the fact that the Emperor is drawn as engaged upon what is considered the menial occupation of pulling a gun carriage.—Reuter.

CONGRESS SESSION

OBSTACLES IN WAY OF FIXED ADJOURNMENT

Washington, Aug. 5.
The Senate's threat to re-write the House of Representatives' version of the Tax Bill constitutes the biggest obstacle to the Administration's objective of Congress adjournment within three weeks.

Senator Pat Harrison, Democrat, of Mississippi, has indicated that the Senate is dissatisfied with the House Bill and intends to make it conform more closely with the original suggestions made by President Roosevelt.

The Progressive party leaders have also expressed their dissatisfaction, Senator Robert M. La Follette the Progressive Senator of Wisconsin having announced his intention of leading the fight to increase taxation on everybody instead of confining the burden to the wealthy.

Once the Tax Bill is out of the way, the Guffey Coal Bill will be the only measure upon which the Senate will be likely to be called upon to act, inasmuch as numerous other measures will probably be junked, including the Thirty-Hour Week Bill, the Ship Subsidy Bill, the Wagner Railroad Pension Bill and the Black Lobby Registration Bill.

The fate of the Wheeler-Rayburn Utility Bill depends upon whether the Administration will accept a compromise which is regarded as possible due to the fact that President Roosevelt and Senator Burton K. Wheeler having been in conference during the week-end.—United Press.

CANTON KEROSENE

CHINESE OIL FIRMS TO SEEK GOVERNMENT AID

Canton's native kerosene merchants have appealed to the Government for special monetary grants and lower taxes to relieve them from the present serious depression, says the Canton Gazette. The merchants also ask for better protection in view of keen foreign competition.

Four or five years ago more than 200 crude oil refineries operated in Canton; but many of them have since closed owing to the depression in their business. The oil-sellers' method of production is another reason of their failure to compete with foreign firms.

The total consumption of kerosene in Canton is about 800,000 tons a month, half of which has been refined by Chinese firms. The rest is imported from foreign refineries. The Chinese Government has been asked to grant subsidies to the native refineries and to protect them from foreign competition.

Do Not Neglect Rheumatism!

Had Mr. Gordon Taylor Purified And Enriched His Blood With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Earlier He Would Have Been Saved Several Years Suffering from rheumatism when they try to ignore the early signs of this painful malady, or waste time and money on wrong treatments.

Mr. Gordon Taylor, of Wentworthville, N.S.W., Australia, has authorized the publication of the following statement in the hope that it will save many who are afflicted with rheumatic ailments the long years of suffering he endured.

"Some years ago I suffered from poverty of blood and developed muscular rheumatism," states Mr. Taylor. "I could hardly lift up my arms, my joints and muscles were so stiff and painful. It was sheer agony to move or walk. For three years I suffered, and tried many remedies without relief."

"At last a colleague recommended me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After taking a few bottles the pains grew less and I could get about much better. I kept on with the pills and am now entirely free from the stiffness and aches of rheumatism."

"The blood is the life of the body, and the cause of rheumatism, so to effect a cure the blood must be purified, built up, enriched. It is because they do exactly this that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have earned their world-wide reputation."

"I am now a healthy, vigorous man, and my general health is such that I can do any work I desire. I am a great admirer of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and recommend them to every sufferer from rheumatism."

THE DAYS BEFORE THE VOLLEY WAS INTRODUCED

WIMBLEDONS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

SOME INTERESTING COMMENTS BY
N. L. (PA) JACKSON

THE RENSHAW BROTHERS INTRODUCE NEW STYLE OF PLAY

Mr. N. L. Jackson, the doyen of referees, and first editor of Pastime, the predecessor of Lawn Tennis and Badminton, makes some interesting comments in Lawn Tennis and Badminton on Wimbledon of the 'eighties to the development of the modern game which he has watched during his sixty years' association with lawn tennis.

It is a far cry to the 1880's, when the twin brothers Renshaw showed how attractive lawn tennis could be made, he writes. Until their advent the game consisted of very long rallies by players at the baseline. Volleying was looked upon as "bad form," and in many "garden party" matches was not permitted. The earlier Championships at Wimbledon were also practically confined to strokes made after the ball had touched the ground. The chief players sought to cultivate pace and accuracy and endeavoured to keep their opponents on the run. This meant also interminable rallies which were distressing to those players who were not in excellent condition.

When, however, the Renshaws, who had developed their game by constant practice in the old covered court at Cheltenham in the winter, and on grass in the summer, entered for the Championships, they quickly revolutionised the game, firstly by group up to the net and volleying and afterwards by introducing the overhead "smash," much to the horror of the veterans who declared that it would ruin the game. Such prophecies were soon dispelled, for the Renshaws so changed the play that it became far more attractive to spectators and the younger players, and to them is due the credit for the world-wide popularity of lawn tennis at the present time.

AN OBSTINATE OPPONENT

It was, however, not without a struggle that the twin brothers succeeded, for they had a very capable and obstinate opponent in H. F. Lawford, who adhered to the baseline game and for some time endeavoured to prove that it could hold its own against the volley. Lawford was a tremendously powerful, bitter and very accurate player, frequently placing his strokes on the side lines and near the baseline, but the clever smashes and volleying of the Renshaws at length overcame him, and he reluctantly admitted that the net-play was too good for him.

Lawn tennis was also fortunate in its chief lady players in its days. Foremost among these was Miss Maud Watson, the first lady champion, who combined a mastery of the game with a kindly and sporting disposition, which made her a model for her sex. She was followed as champion by Miss Lottie Dod, another perfect sports-woman, with a wonderful record: for in addition to gaining the highest honours at lawn tennis, she won the ladies' golf championship, was captain of the English ladies' hockey team and was fleur de peche champion at skating and archery. Miss Bingley, afterwards Mrs. Hillyard, was a very fine baseline player, and won her championships as much by determination as skill; while Miss Douglass, now Mrs. Lambert Chambers, established a record of seven championships, which is still unbeaten.

AMERICAN RYDER CUP SELECTIONS

WHAT EXPERTS THINK

OF TEAM TO MEET BRITAIN

Walter Hagen, former holder of the British and American open championships, has been appointed captain of the United States team to meet Great Britain in the Ryder Cup match, which will be played at Ridgewood, New Jersey, on September 28 and 29. The team is:

Walter Hagen (captain), Paul Runyan, Sam Parks, Jun., Olin Dutra, Ky Laffoon, Johnny Revolta, Henry Picard, Horton Smith, Gene Sarazen, and Craig Wood.

Hagen will play in the contest, and not merely act in a non-playing capacity.

"There is nothing honorary about Hagen's appointment," said Mr. Jacobs, president of the American Professional Golfers' Association. "He thoroughly deserves the captaincy if for no other reason than his grand finish in the United States Open this year. In addition to his record in the past two years, he shapes up well with the other members of the team."

Six of the eight, Runyan, Dutra, Horton Smith, Sarazen and Craig Wood, were in the side that lost at Southport two years ago.

THE STRONGEST TEAM EVER? Hagen's appointment as captain is not from any feeling of sentiment, writes Mr. George Greenwood, but because his playing ability shows no signs of deterioration as the years roll by.

It is not too much to say that he would have won the recent United States Open, in which he finished third, but for a bad break in the last nine holes of the fourth round, played in a storm of wind and rain.

Nearly 44, Hagen has announced that he will retire after next year's American championship. He has and the distinction of being captain of the American team in all five matches in the Ryder Cup competition, in which the United States have won two and Great Britain two. He is, I think, the greatest shot-maker who ever lived, especially with the masher-club.

Hagen has under his charge perhaps the strongest Ryder Cup team yet nominated. Among the new players is S. Parks, Jun., of Pittsburgh, who recently won the American championship. He is a young Varsity student who turned professional during the financial slump.

Another of the new men is Laffoon, of Chicago, a young man who has

Future Of Ladies' Tennis Finalists

HELEN JACOBS

HELEN MOODY TO DEFEND

WIMBLEDON TITLE NEXT YEAR

HELEN JACOBS NOT TO PLAY

(By STANLEY N. DOUST)

London, July 8.
"I hope to play again at Wimbledon next year and defend my title," said Mrs. Helen Wills Moody yesterday.

She is now the women's champion for the seventh time, and has equalled the achievement of Mrs. Lambert Chambers, but she must become "Queen of Tennis" once more to establish a record.

Mrs. Moody's magnificent victory over Miss Jacobs by 6-3, 8-6, 7-5 in the final of the women's singles on Saturday, after it seemed certain she would lose, was the talk of the sporting world.

Miss Jacobs led by 5-2 in the final set, and had match point at 5-3—only to lose. It was one of the most brilliant matches ever seen, and both women deserved to win.

At the end Mrs. Moody delightedly flung her racket into the air. Usually she expresses no emotion on the court; but she had cause for her elation then. Her return to the tennis throne was a wonderful achievement, though she modestly declared: "I think I was lucky."

HER FOUR DEFEATS

Miss Helen Jacobs said she was doubtful whether she would play again next year.

"I would like to," she said, "but I have been over here so many times and have lost in four finals. Your people may become tired of seeing me and look on me as just a player who cannot win."

"I thought the crowd were very generous to me, and though I lost I am glad I played well. Mrs. Moody made a wonderful recovery in that last set."

The two Helens came from the same town in California. Mrs. Wills Moody is 29 and Miss Jacobs 25. They learned their tennis at the same club, and when Miss Wills won her own national championship Miss Jacobs won the junior national championship.

They have met three times in the final at Wimbledon—in 1929, 1932, and on Saturday Mrs. Wills Moody won the first final by 6-2, 6-1—the same scores in each year.

Altogether she has played in eight Wimbledon finals, and has won seven.

LAWN TENNIS FIXTURES

"D" Division Matches For To-Day

Last week's rain has further delayed the local Lawn Tennis Championships, and the competitions again threaten to drag out unduly. This afternoon, however, the "C" Division matches which are scheduled should be carried through as there seems every prospect that the weather will remain good.

The programme for to-day is as follows:
Chinese "A" v. Hongkong C.C.
Kowloon C.C. v. U.S.R.C.
Reno "B" v. Indian R.C.
Reno "A" v. Craigrower

AMERICAN SERVERS SUPERIOR

TO OTHER TENNIS PLAYERS

SECRET OF THEIR SUCCESS

Many people go to Wimbledon with the express purpose of trying to fathom the secret of the superiority of the American servers.

Unless the head is correctly poised at the beginning and at the end of the service, you will never learn an American service, says Lawn Tennis and Badminton.

The throw up and the balance of the front arm can be copied from photographs, but after the throw-up the left arm, when balanced parallel to the ground, points in the direction you intend to serve the ball.

As the ball and racket meet the body weight is brought forward by means of its levers—the head and arms. If the front arm is not made to do its proper share of this weight transfer, loss of power will result, and eventually you will suffer from shoulder strain. Don't throw the ball up too high. You should meet it at the hanging point, which is just before it begins to fall. Don't stand square when serving. At the bottom of the swing, turn the racket face to the rear. If you want the ball to go to your opponent's forehand meet it on the right side, and vice versa. You should have at least two kinds of service. One of the principal objects of the server is to force his opponent out of position.

Some extracts from the book "Lawn Tennis as Played by the Champions," edited by S. Wallis Merriew, and published by American Lawn Tennis, is, as the editor remarks in his foreword, a tremendous improvement on last year's publication.

"Glimpses of the Tennis Stars in Prose and Picture" would be an apt description of this interesting handbook for those who want to improve their lawn tennis. The well chosen cinematographic photographs will dispel many fallacies and I hope shatter many false illusions and theories of both players and critics, writes G. Blake Caulfield.

How often have you been told never to drop the hand of the racket below the wrist? Being of a credulous nature and not endowed with an analytical brain, you accepted the theory without comment.

Of course what these experts really mean is: you are to keep the racket behind the wrist until contact in all strokes except the lob. The photographs in this book are in themselves an education. You cannot but admire and marvel at the power and perfect timing of F. J. Perry's forehand drive. The beautiful head poise and arm balance of Crawford. The knee work and graceful body balance of S. B. Wood. I should advise all would-be servers to study the photo showing the powerful service of Lester Bessie, the effortless one of Sidney Wood, not forgetting Vines' classic example of the American cannon-ball service.

Those who did not avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing that great Cinematograph artist, Hans Nusslein at Wimbledon last year and only know of him by repute will now be able to study his methods as depicted by the camera. The technique of Cochet's smash is demonstrated in eight photos. The head poise, arm balance and footwork and the service of the great French champion's success in killing a smash. Cochet is equally at home when discussing "Court Tactics and the Theory of Angles."

F. J. Perry, Wilmer Allison, W. T. Tilden, George Lott, J. Farnley Parry, Vincent Richards and Lester Bessie, all contribute to make this annual one of the most useful and interesting publications I have ever read. I especially recommend it to my fellow coaches.

SOME EXTRACTS
The pictures alone will convince your pupils of the soundness of your theories. Space prevents me from saying all I want to about this work; you must be content with the following extracts:

F. J. Perry:—"I am a firm believer in speed as a fundamental of the game! Get well down to the ball; your knees were given to you for that purpose."

Wilmer L. Allison:—"Footwork is just as important in volleying as it is in making a ground stroke. Never half-volley or low volley a ball when you can get in and take it higher. Fortunately the smash is the easiest of all strokes to execute!"

W. T. Tilden:—"In sport, timing, through the medium of footwork, can be learned so well that it becomes almost second nature!"

George M. Lott:—"The use of the lob is neglected to such an extent in these days that it causes me occasionally to burst into tears!"

J. Farnley Parry:—"The change of pace and the change of twist are almost as important as the direction

POSTPONED MATCH TO-DAY

There is only one match down for decision in the local Lawn Bowls Championship for this afternoon, this being between T. Armstrong, of the Civil Service C.C., and H. A. Alves, the Club de Recreio player.

This fixture was arranged for July 23 but owing to Armstrong developing a poisoned foot the game had to be postponed. It is to be played on the Kowloon C.C. green and is in the quarter-finals of the Open Singles Championship.

made tremendous headway in the last two years. There is Indian blood in his veins. J. Revolta, of Milwaukee, is also a new comer. He recently won the Western Open title, second in importance only to the United States championship. The last of the four is Henry Picard, of Pennsylvania, a tall young man with an effortless style—who, it will be remembered, finished sixth in the recent British Open at Moulton.

LAWN TENNIS FIXTURES

"D" Division Matches For To-Day

Last week's rain has further delayed the local Lawn Tennis Championships, and the competitions again threaten to drag out unduly. This afternoon, however, the "C" Division matches which are scheduled should be carried through as there seems every prospect that the weather will remain good.

The programme for to-day is as follows:
Chinese "A" v. Hongkong C.C.
Kowloon C.C. v. U.S.R.C.
Reno "B" v. Indian R.C.

DRIVER'S TILT WITH DEATH

GERMAN MOTORIST
LOSES WHEEL

ENDURANCE TEST
AT ADENAU

Adenau, July 28.
Tense excitement prevailed among the 200,000 enthusiasts assembled at the Nuerburging to see the "Grosser Preis von Deutschland," the Grand Prix of Germany, the most interesting German motor race of the whole year, as, unlike the racing on the Avus track at Berlin, where the tests concern speed only, the Nuerburging, which is an artificially constructed track with many curves, twists, hills and declivities, is also a test of practical utility and durability under difficult conditions.

Among the spectators were the chief of the German automobile sport, Huelshelm, regional leader Bruckner, personal adjutant of Chancellor Hitler, as well as Secretary of State Koenig and Ministerial Director Brandenburg, both of the Reichs Traffic Ministry.

The chief favourite for the race was the German racing driver, Manfred von Brauchitsch, who was using a Mercedes-Benz car. He justified this opinion and after a brilliant performance was nearing the finishing line half a minute ahead of the Italian champion and seemed sure of success, when in the last round his left back tyre burst and the wheel fell off completely, so that he could only finish the race at a crawl.

The final result was that Nuvoletti finished first, Hans Stuck on Auto-union second, Carracola on Mercedes-Benz third, Rosemeyer on Auto-union fourth, while von Brauchitsch, putting up a remarkable performance, came in fifth in spite of his mishap.

As all to-night's papers declare, nobody begrudges Nuvoletti his hard-won victory, even though, but for von Brauchitsch's mishap, he would only have scored second place.

When Huelshelm presented the winners with their prizes this evening, he expressed his hearty congratulations and acknowledgment of Nuvoletti's success, declaring that German sportsmen were always ready to recognise a splendid and honest achievement such as this.

NUVOLARI'S DIFFICULTY

A curious fact is that Nuvoletti himself seemed to have difficulties with his machine and for a moment dropped back to sixth place, only recovering the lost ground later with a great effort.

Carracola also had his share of bad luck. He led the whole field for nine rounds and at the end of the first round was a full 12 seconds ahead, so that engine trouble seems to have been general.

At daybreak the mountains were completely wrapped in clouds, but rain fell just before the race started, the wet track and bad weather preventing the reaching of record speeds.

The times for the first three cars were Nuvoletti: four hours, eight minutes 10.1/5 seconds, which means an average of 121.10 kilometres per

200 METRE RUN

Warsaw, Aug. 5.
Miss Stella Walsh, the noted runner, broke the world record for the 200 metres to-day when she beat her own previous time by one fifth of a second.

The famous girl athlete was competing in a race here to-day when she covered the 200 metres in the new world record time of 23.6/10 secs., her previous best and the old world record being 23.8/10 secs.—Reuter.

RECORDS BROKEN

Japanese Swimmers Do
Well In Trials

Tokyo, Aug. 5.
The American swimmers, who are now in the country in preparation for their International Meet against the best of Japanese aquatic stars, on August 17 and 19, were guests at a tea-party at the Japanese Foreign Office to-day.

In Sunday's elimination contests, which were watched by the Americans, Hiroshi Negami created a new record for the 400 metres, which he covered in 4 mins. 45 4/5 secs.

Reizo, another famous Japanese swimmer, made a new world mark when he negotiated the 100 metres breast stroke in 1 min. 13 secs.

The weather is now considerably cooler and permits strenuous practice. When the Americans first arrived here, the weather was so warm that they were unable to sleep at night with the result that they could not go in for strenuous practice. They had to be content with a daily swim and light training.—United Press.

Wimbledon Of Fifty Years Ago

SOME INTERESTING COMMENTS BY

small stands, one reserved for members and the Press, the other for the public, a third was uncovered and served as a good position for the scoring board. Nearly all the spectators went by train from Waterloo, having a long walk by the side of the railway from Wimbledon station.

During the championships the attendance of smartly dressed ladies, and men in frock coat and top hats, would amount to a thousand or so, very different to the huge crowds which are now attracted by this event, although the play there was quite as good as it now is.

The Renshaws dominated the games for many years, but on one occasion the champion (William) had a very narrow escape. This happened when he was playing H. S. Barlow, who wanted but a stroke to win, when Renshaw stunted and dropped his racket, after making an easy return.

As he was scrambling along on hands and knees to retrieve his weapon Barlow could have "smashed" the ball and gained a victory, but he advanced laughing, evidently amused by his opponent's difficulty, and simply patted the ball over the net. The champion, with extraordinary agility, regained his feet and won the rally and afterwards the match. Truly an amazing recovery!

Barlow was a fine all-round sportsman, being first class at cricket and billiards and good enough at croquet to win the championship and, above all a cheery and congenial companion. His brother-in-law, Harry Grove, was also a first class player and these two, with W. C. Taylor and later H. G. B. Chapman, were denied the highest honours of the game, simply because of the brilliancy of the Renshaws, who would, I believe, have easily mastered all the new strokes that have been introduced to the game since their day, and have still been unbeatable if "anno domini" had not prevented them from keeping their form. In proof of this I may mention that when Dr. Dwight and R. D. Sears, the doubles champions of the United States, paid their first visit to this country, the former, who was of short stature, used to return the ball while it was rising, holding the racket at arms length with the face turned slightly downwards. This stroke was a novelty here, but the Renshaws, having once seen it, copied it perfectly after a brief "knock up," and used it more effectively than its originators.

THE LAST CENTURY

The leading players of the last century were all well-to-do, and paid all their own expenses, except occasionally when a few accepted invitations to be "put-up" for open tournaments by good natured hosts, who were desirous of making their meetings successful. The competitors who made a round of the tournaments spent a considerable sum in pursuit of their pleasure, and the prizes they gained were not of much value. The "cracks" of the present day have luxurious tours abroad, play at all the principal tournaments at home, win valuable prizes, and have all their expenses paid by a generous Lawn Tennis Association when they are officially selected to represent their country.

These new conditions have evolved an entirely different class of competitors to those of the earlier days, when all paid their own expenses.

POPULARISING THE GAME

The annual visits of the Renshaws to the Hotel Beau Site at Cannes was undoubtedly the cause of the enormous success of lawn tennis at all the Riviera resorts, where it was well established long before any open tournaments were started elsewhere on the Continent. The energy of Lady Wood at Boulogne initiated the first tournament there, while the geniality and tact of Sir George Dainton established the Dinard week which remained one of the best and most popular of the Continental meetings for many years. It was a pleasure to me to have been the referee at both of those fixtures, and a satisfaction afterwards to have acted in a similar capacity at St. Servan, Parnes Cabourg, Baden-Baden, Ostend and Le Touquet, all of which were well supported by the best English and Continental players.

As I was engaged as referee in England from early in May until these foreign meetings commenced in September, and this programme continued for about twenty years, my knowledge of the players and the game is fairly complete.

As I have been my good fortune to live long enough to see lawn tennis grow from the garden-party stage until it has become more popular all over the world than any other sport except, perhaps, football.

SERGEANT'S RETURN

Arriving To-morrow With
His Wife

Sergeant T. J. Hemaley, of the Hongkong Police Force, is returning to the Colony to-morrow aboard the P. and O. liner Naldora, accompanied by his wife, formerly Miss Betty Ratcliff, whom he married while on home leave.

Prior to joining the local Police in the latter part of 1929, Sergeant Hemaley held no mean record in the athletic world in England. In 1927 he won the Kent County cross-country championship and in 1928 he was teamed with Sam Ferris, of Great Britain, in the London to Brighton five mile relay. In the same year Hemaley ran fourth to D. G. A. Lowe in the half mile event at the London Championships.

In his last public appearance in England in 1929, he won the Droyer Hemaley held one mile trophy for the third year in succession.

Within a month of his arrival in the Colony, he participated in the Hongkong University open half mile race, and in 1930 won the open mile event at the Sacred Heart College sports.

Tottenham Hotspur F.C. have re-signed Alfred Day, their Welsh international right half, who had been placed on the transfer list. Day was chosen to play for Wales against Ireland when he was still in the 'Spurs' Reserve team.

CHAPTER XL

Katharine hadn't wanted, really, to go on the trip with the Millard's. Dick Millard and his handsome, resourceful, managing Hilda had been very insistent, however. It was to be a two-day picnic in the mountains. Oh, but they often did it! And they were going east soon—avenue, and the world would be their last chance. Miss Stryker really must come. Evelyn Vincent, too. Frank Millard, Dirk's big, handsome brother, a football player at Berkeley, was going along. Frank had "fallen for" Katharine, Hilda said enthusiastically. The party would simply be spoiled if Katharine did not come.

More to please Evelyn than for any other reason, the girl had consented. Frank Millard's attention were not unpleasant. Indeed, she found herself liking the big fellow with the rich, scapular, golden hair and the beautiful profile.

She went. They had tents and bedding rolls; they had a de luxe equipment of cups and plates and spoons and forks, all neatly folded in a great leather case strapped on the side of the big touring car. There was space in the trunk at the back for their few bags. It was all very gay and casual and Bohemian.

After the sun of Roanoke the green of the mountains was cool and grateful. Strenuous climbing in unexpected places. Dirk broiled bacon and made coffee and Hilda asked Frank to open jars of calvian and produced salted crackers and jellies from nowhere. A de luxe picnic.

They had their sketching things and the days were full, what with trout fishing and chatter and bathing in crystal-cool rivers and playing Dirk's pet gramophone which went with him wherever he went.

"He took it with him to Russia last year," Hilda said. "Imagine, my dear, Russia!"

She talked incessantly, spreading her hands, punctuating all her sentences and smiles. Almost, in this amusing company, Katharine forgot what the summer and the early days of autumn had been like. She enjoyed it and thought she wished it could go on forever.

Frank Millard worshipped her with his eyes and his inarticulate words. The others smiled on them benignly, as though they saw romance blossoming and were glad of it.

The two days passed serenely enough. There had never been such dawns and sunsets. The food was marvelous. Yet, about eight o'clock, hours, wrapped in an arm blanket and woke to dash your face with cool mountain water and fall wolfishly on toast and coffee, eggs and bacon.

But the Millards admitted reluctantly that they had to turn their faces toward the road and leave. Dirk had work to do before he left for the east. So the big car was packed again; the women, in riding breeches and jerseys with handkerchiefs knotted at their throats, helped Katharine, who was a lemon-yellow sweater, and old jodhpur breeches were shabby and stained. She sat on a rock, both rust boots stretched out before her, drinking coffee from an enameled cup. Her fair hair was ruffled; there was a deep apricot tinge on her rounded cheeks. The pale girl who had alighted from the eastern train a few weeks ago could scarcely have been recognized in this bronzed Aurora.

"Fun! It's been marvellous," she said simply to the blond giant at her feet. "I never in my life had such a glorious time."

"Honestly do you mean it?" Frank Millard wanted to know. "I mean it if you do, because we do this all the time and you're staying forever, aren't you?"

"Oh, I don't know about that!" She was laughing, but some inner terror for an instant darkened her eyes and chilled her smile.

It was sweet to be admired, to be the centre of this agreeable group. Why couldn't this be enough for her? Why should her thoughts go harking back to one man, out of all the world, who had floated her?

Frank drove on the homeward drive and the three insisted that she sit beside him in the seat. Hilda was heavily tactful about this; Katharine didn't mind. They were nice people and they liked her and showed it. She glowed in the atmosphere of admiration and easy laughter. Frank didn't talk much—he wasn't given to idle chatter—but every now and then he gave her an eloquent look.

He had to give most of his attention to the driving, however. There were treacherous dips in this canon road. Sometimes a sheer drop appeared on their left without an instant's warning. But Frank had a surety on the wheel. Katharine was in a daze. It was the way, Hilda explained, they liked to travel. That night they camped on the edge of the desert under the stars. Frank had his guitar with him—he'd been in a college orchestra—and he played "Paris mol' d'amour" with a good deal of feeling. The stars and the music and the campfire all made an unforgettable scene.

Life would be so simple, Katharine argued with herself, if one could follow the line of least resistance. She was, for example, married to Frank Millard and bore him fine children and loved him quite uncritically and made a sort of picnic of existence. But she had muddled up her life before she met him. She liked him a lot—he was as likable as a big Newfoundland dog—a friendly child. But love? Well, she had known that once; it hadn't been exactly pleasant. It had been all dizzy heights and awful depths. She would try to steer clear of it in the future.

All of this she thought as Frank drummed the plaintive music and the cigarettes curled toward the red glow of the campfire. Evelyn Vincent was asleep, propped rather uncomfortably against the seat cushions of the car. Presently they all untied their bedding rolls and said yawning good nights. The women, in riding breeches and jerseys with handkerchiefs knotted at their throats, helped Katharine, who was a lemon-yellow sweater, and old jodhpur breeches were shabby and stained. through the tent flap. Miss Vincent snored, and Hilda stirred uneasily in her sleep.

The music echoed in Katharine's brain. "Speak-to-me-of-love . . ."

After a long time her eyes closed and she breathed easily and quietly. There were tears on her cheeks.

No one was moving about when she awoke. Dressing hastily, running her ivory comb through her flaxen curls, she glanced out to see that Frank and his brother lay in the relaxed and rather touching abandon of persons deeply asleep.

Restless, Katharine strolled about. She needed exercise, she told herself. Before the sun came up she would have a brief walk just as far as that mesquite bush in the middle distance.

She walked along, absorbed in her thoughts. To-morrow she would be back at Silencia; the pleasant, easy life would begin again, with sun-drenched days filled with sketching and music and bridge, and the books in the library and the adobe house. It was not a bad life, but for a young, restless, eager girl it was not everything.

She glanced over her shoulder. Perhaps she had better be turning back. Someone would waken and miss her, perhaps be alarmed. But when she looked in the direction from which she had come she could see nothing of the car or the peaked tent or the sleeping men. Her heart beating a little faster, she whirled, increasing her pace. Her feet, in their russet boots, squeaked in the sand, slipping with every step. Oh, but she must see them all in a minute. She would hear Frank's hearty laugh and smell the smoke of the breakfast fire and the good scent of boiling coffee.

She walked as quickly as she could, shielding her eyes from the rising sun. That was just what she needed. She had walked west when she started. Or had she?

Silence and sand and cactus. A gopher that hopped out from the shadow of a bush and stared at her curiously. Silence and a wheezing red ball in the heavens.

Katharine was lost.

Michael went up to the great iron bell that dangled between two redwood posts and pulled the rope vigorously. A dark-skinned girl in a print frock appeared, stroking her crisp curls and smiling at him with a flash of dazzling white teeth.

"Mess Stryker?" But she has gone.

His heart sank like lead in his breast. Gone? Gone where? The dark-haired maid did not seem to know. But she would call Miss Daisy Ingram.

Michael found himself in a cool, low-ceiled room with white walls and niches in which curious bright figures appeared. Over the polished floor the heels of Miss Daisy came tapping. "A friend of Miss Katharine's? Well, how very nice." She beamed at the young man. "They've gone to the mountains. A matter of several hundred miles, I believe. You will wait until they return?"

Michael said rather grimly: "If you can tell me the way I'll follow them."

CINEMA NEWS

NOTES FROM THE THEATRES

Where do they hail from this seemingly endless influx of delectable chorines who decorate the Hollywood musical background for the antics of Maurice Chevalier in "Folies Bergere," showing on Friday at the King's Theatre, revealed some surprising facts. Dave Gould who staged the dance ensembles for this 20th Century Picture, selected his chorus from more than 500 availed candidates. All of them were young, exceptionally beautiful, shapely and talented. The select seventy-three are the quintessence of beauty blondes of various shadings from straw to platinum, brunettes and red-heads. Only thirteen of their number came from big towns. Of these, only five named New York as the city of their origin and the rest were divided among Chicago, Detroit and Los Angeles. The majority of the beauties unblushingly named such obscure hamlets as Parsons, Kansas; Weatherford, Texas; Bluff, Utah; Eagle Rock, California; and Lawton, Oklahoma, as the spots for which they grew homesick. For like Darryl F. Zanuck, the producer of "Folies Bergere," who boasts a "whistle-stop" in the great midwest as his birthplace, they hail largely from "the sticks." Louisiana, Washington, New Jersey and Kansas were next with two each, trailed by New Mexico, Indiana, Michigan, Alabama, Tennessee, Nebraska, Oregon, Iowa, Ohio, Arizona and Georgia with but a single qualifying chorine apiece. The "corn belt," obviously, is a surprisingly strong bidder for beauty honours, whereas the South, noted for its beauties, proved weak. Virginia, Florida, Kentucky, the Carolinas, Maryland and Mississippi fall completely of representation. But there's a tollable aggregation of right smart girls from down Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana way, while old New England claims not a single beauty to the chorus of this Joseph M. Schenck production.

"The Best Man Wins" Columbia's "The Best Man Wins," a spectacular, rollicking film starring Edmund Lowe and Jack Holt with support will be seen on Thursday at the Queen's Theatre. Based on a story by Ben G. Kohn, adapted to the screen by Ethel Hill and Bruce Manning, "The Best Man Wins" tells the exciting tale of two deep-sea divers and their adventurous careers on opposite sides of the law. One becomes a diver for a smuggling ring, the other an officer of the waterfront police. Their meeting underwater in the final sequence is said to be one of the most breathtaking scenes to be seen in pictures. Interpolated in the dramatic line is the romance rivalry between Lowe and Holt for Miss Florence Rice's favour. The latter, daughter of sports writer Grantland Rice, has been in pictures for only a brief spell, but has progressed remarkably since her debut. Others in the cast include J. Farrell MacDonald, Frank Sheridan, Bradley Page and Mitchell Lewis.

"G Men" Many months were spent in preparation before a camera turned on the first National picture "G Men," a story of the daring exploits of the men of the United States Department of Justice, which is now showing at the Alhambra Theatre. The herculean amount of research was necessary to depict effectively the six months' training period through which all recruits go before becoming full-fledged "G Men." In order to assure picture accuracy in the finger-printing, photographing, of bullets, finger-print comparisons, microscopes, helmets and a maze of other mysterious apparatus employed by the modern criminologist. Experts who valued the sets described them as remarkable examples of a complete criminologist's laboratory. The herculean part of the Department of Justice played in bringing to justice the perpetrators of these crimes is dramatically depicted. The picture is one of the most thrilling dramas ever screened, taken from newspaper headlines of the past three years of the battle of government men against the arch criminals of the country. The all star cast is headed by James Cagney and includes Margaret Lindsay, Ann Dvorak, Robert Armstrong, Barton MacLane, Lloyd Nolan, William Harrigan, Russell Hopton and Edward Pawley. William Keighley directed it from the screen play by Seton I. Miller based on the story by Gregory Rogers.

Cagney, Hollywood's most famous "Bad Man," describes his part role as acting is said to be the finest in his career. Some critics have gone as far as to say that in "G Men," he has turned in a performance even greater than in the memorable "Public Enemy." Ann Dvorak, who revealed a surprising talent for song and dance, in "Sweet Music," the Warner Bros. musical, has a similar part in this film plus an opportunity to show her dramatic talents.

"Dracula" A strange, weird motion picture that outdoes all previous mysteries of the screen is "Dracula," the startling Universal production which is showing at the Star Theatre to-day. It may safely be said that this story is distinctly in a class by itself, and that its subject matter is absolutely unique among film productions. For Bram Stoker's famous novel of the same name, deals with human vampirism, which ancient superstition describes as horrible "undead" creatures who rise from their graves at night. The title role of Count Dracula is played with remarkable effect by Bela Lugosi, who created the same part in the stage play, and who depicts an arresting performance as the sinister vampire who is the central character of the story. Helen Chandler is altogether charming and capable in the principal feminine part, and David Manners, as her fiancé, does the type of work which has made him one of the most popular of leading men. Other members of the cast who contribute outstanding characterizations are Edward Van Sloan, Dwight Frye, Francis B. Saxe, Robert Burton, Van Sloan and Robert Montgomery. Van Sloan, by the way, are seen in the roles which they created in the stage play, when they appeared in company with Lugosi.

"Girls, Please" Since the famous scene played with Leslie Henson over a bowl of punch in "Funny Faces," Sydney Howard, does the type of work which has made him one of the most popular of leading men. Other members of the cast who contribute outstanding characterizations are Edward Van Sloan, Dwight Frye, Francis B. Saxe, Robert Burton, Van Sloan and Robert Montgomery. Van Sloan, by the way, are seen in the roles which they created in the stage play, when they appeared in company with Lugosi.

"The Flame Within" A full symphony orchestra plays the stirring music created by Jerome Kern which enhances the dramatic action of "The Flame Within" current attraction at the Queen's Theatre. Ann Harding, Herbert Marshall, Maureen O'Sullivan, Louis Hayward and Henry Stephenson portray the principal roles in this new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production which was written and directed by Edmund Goulding. As a famous woman psychiatrist who finds herself involved in an unexpected emotional situation with one of her patients, Miss Harding plays her most dramatic role since leaving the New York stage. "The Flame Within" is a beautiful picture of a woman's life.

If you like sparkling dialogue, rapid-fire action, some of the most gorgeous mountain scenery ever to be flashed on a screen, and players admirably cast, go to the Oriental Theatre to-day and to-morrow. "The Flame Within" is a beautiful picture of a woman's life.

H.K. YACHTSMEN NEAR DEATH AS BOAT SINKS

HEROIC STRUGGLE IN STORM
JUST ABLE TO SWIM TO ISLAND RESCUED THIS MORNING
BY SAMPAN

Three local yachtsmen almost lost their lives last night when the "Wasp II," (A. 3) owned by Mr. Merritt N. Cootes, U.S. Vice-Consul, foundered in a gale off the Ninepins, about six miles from Cape Collinson. Those aboard, in addition to the owner, were Mr. J. R. Bergne-Coupland, of Reiss, Massey and Co. and Mr. H. C. Mecke, of the Bank Line. After being nearly two hours in the water, all three managed to swim to a small island, where they remained the night, eventually being picked up by a passing sampan.

After the yacht foundered, the three men managed to hang on to an inflated rubber mattress, but when it was apparent that they were in danger of being carried out to sea, they made a bold bid to swim to a nearby island, which they reached in an exhausted state.

All three yachtsmen are suffering from shock and from the effects of a night spent in wet clothing on an uninhabited island, and are confined to their homes.

Mr. Cootes, interviewed by the Telegraph this morning, stated that he and his companions were at a point between the Ninepins and Steep Island just beyond Fu Tau Mun Pass, at about six o'clock last night when a sudden squall struck them.

SAIL JAMMED
"The mainsail got jammed," said Mr. Cootes, "and we were unable to lower it. The wind then hit us and we shipped lots of water, with the result that the yacht immediately foundered."

"We all jumped clear of the yacht, and managed to get hold of an inflated rubber mattress which we had with us. The tide and wind were so strong, however, that we were getting carried away from islands in the vicinity, and finally we decided to swim ashore. After a hard swim we reached a small island half a mile away. By this time it was dark."

NIGHT ON ISLAND
"We are fortunate to get ashore, but we had to spend the whole night on this small island in wet clothes—an experience which we by no means enjoyed."

"This morning we hailed a passing sampan, which took us to Shek-O, and from there we came into Hongkong by motor."

Mr. Cootes added that whilst they were in the water, several launches passed within half a mile, but all efforts to attract their attention by shouting and signalling failed.

Asked if he was any the worse for the experience, Mr. Cootes laughingly said, "Not at present, but perhaps I could tell you more about that to-morrow!"

ANOTHER VERSION
Wakened from sound slumber, Mr. Bergne-Coupland this morning recorded a representative of the Telegraph an interview and gave his version of the night's happenings.

"We were returning from a cruise in Mr. Cootes' yacht to Double Haven in Mira Bay," he said. "There were seven other boats with us, but our motor seized and we fell behind them. When we were somewhere between Ninepins and Green Island—not the one in the harbour here but the other side of Clear Water Bay—there was a severe squall. We tried to reef our sail, but we had left the reefing tool behind."

"We hacked the mainsail down and cut the shrouds and halyard and tried to get the boat into the wind. Every time we got her head into the wind, she would lurch and she would look as if she was going to capsize. She just lurches and lurches. I don't know what she will do, but I don't think she will stay afloat for long."

WARNED

(Special to "Telegraph")

Berlin, August 5.

Flaming pink posters, ten feet high, are plastered all over this city in the latest move of a campaign against the opponents of the Nazi regime.

The posters shout:

"German People, listen!

"Agitators are at work."

"Beware of the underworld men who come to you in sheep's clothing, but who within are ravening wolves."

Squads of Storm Troops in lorries paraded through the streets of the city at night shouting slogans against the opponents of Nazism.

There is considerable unrest.—Reuter Special.

Berlin, Aug. 5.

Dr. Goebbels, the German Minister of Propaganda, launched a campaign against the Roman Catholic anti-Nazi to-day and simultaneously the authorities ordered the arrest of scores of Jews on charges of "race pollution."

All day long thousands were gathered at the bill-boards reading Goebbels' placards warning the public against the agitators in their midst, the "wolves in sheep's clothing," and the Communist conspiracies which are allegedly afoot.—United Press.

DIVERTING WATERS TO SAFE COURSE

HOPE FOR CONTROL

Nanking, Aug. 6.

Important decisions relating to ways and means of tackling the present Hwangho flood situation in West Shantung and North Kiangsi were reached at a meeting of the National Economic Council this morning, with Mr. H. H. Kung, Finance Minister, in the chair and more than 20 members attending.

It was decided at the conference that outlets should be provided for the flood waters now rushing through the branches in the dykes.

Concerning the serious break in the dyke at Tungchuan, on the Honan-Shantung border, the conference decided that the Shantung Provincial Government, together with the Hwangho Conservancy Board, should devise immediate means of guiding the rising waters to flow back to the main river course.

As regards the threatening flood situation in North Kiangsi, the meeting entrusted the Hwangho Conservancy Board and the Shantung Government with guiding the flow of the Nanang Lake waters into Tungel Lake and then back to the main Hwangho bed. For the flood waters now invading Wolshan Lake along the Shantung-Kiangsi border the meeting requested the Huan River Conservancy Board and the Kiangsi Government to provide an outlet to the sea by way of the central section of the Grand Canal and the Lutang River.

Although repairs have been made at the branches along the 5th and 6th watergates of the major embankment of the Hwangho, the rising waters are still rushing in at a terrific speed and there is no telling whether the repairs will hold or not, according to a message received from the Chairman of the Hwangho Conservancy Board to-day.

The branches in the dyke, according to Mr. Li, are about 5,000 feet long. One consoling fact, however, is that the flow through the 6th watergate is comparatively steady.—Central News.

AID FOR REFUGEES

Shantung, Aug. 6.

In view of the seriousness of the flood situation in China, Mr. Nel Lan-fang, the famous Chinese actor, is planning to give a series of dramatic performances here to raise funds for the relief of flood refugees in the various provinces.

It is learned that Messrs. Chang Shian-lin, Wang Shian-lin, and Tu Shian-lin are in the city for the purpose of raising funds for the relief of flood refugees.

SEQUEL TO MURDERS

Peking, August 6.

The presentation of fresh Japanese demands is feared as a sequel to the assassination of Colonel Liu Tso-chi, commander of the Peace Preservation Corps in the Luantung Area, the fatal wounding of a Japanese gendarme in the course of the assault, and the threatening of Major Fukui, commanding a Japanese battalion at Luanchow.

Colonel Liu was murdered at Luanchow, in the demilitarized zone, on Sunday, when four Chinese gunmen, three of whom are reported to have been arrested subsequently, fired upon him from close range.

The Japanese gendarme gave chase when the gunmen had succeeded in shooting Colonel Liu to death, and was wounded when the assassins turned and fired at him. He died yesterday.

Colonel Sakai, Chief of Staff of the Japanese forces in North China, significantly informed Mr. Wang Keh-min, the acting Chairman of the Peking Political Council to-day, that "nothing could be achieved until the administration of the five provinces of North China had been completely reorganised."

Further developments are expected when the Japanese authorities complete their investigations into the affair.—Reuter.

KINGSFORD-SMITH'S CHALLENGE

(Special to "Telegraph")

Honolulu, August 5.

Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, the Australian flying ace, en route to Los Angeles, to-day declared that he expects his forthcoming London to Melbourne adventure will be his last major distance flight.

He says he hopes to break the present 72-hour record by at least four hours.

Sir Charles expects to break down Australian opposition to the use of American planes commercially. "I believe," he is quoted as saying, "that the sheer force of public opinion will demand that Australian air lines should be equipped with American planes, which are years ahead of anything Great Britain is producing."

After flying his Lady Southern Cross from England to Australia, Sir Charles expects to make a good will flight to Japan. He also proposes to confer with Pan-American Airways regarding plans for joint Pan-American Airways and Australian co-operation in the establishment of a United States-Antipodes air line in 1936.—United Press.

It has been a real "Bank" holiday for the county cricket clubs, which have greatly benefited from the large attendances at to-day's matches.

Official figures show that over 100,000 attended nine matches, 27,000 of whom watched the annual Battle of the Roses at Bradford, while there were 20,000 at the Kennington Oval for the Surrey v. Notts match, and 17,000 gathered at Swansea, where the South Africans captured the imagination, even the football grandstand being filled. Only the Australian teams in 1921 and 1926 drew equal gates.

At Eastbourne, Harvard and Yale defeated Oxford and Cambridge at lawn tennis by 11 matches to nine, the remaining match not being played.

ENDEAVOUR WINS

Glorious weather favoured the opening of Cowes Week, at which Their Majesties the King and Queen, with the cream of the aristocracy, were present. Endeavour won the Gayle Memorial Cup, the first big "J" Class event, holding the lead throughout and covering the 30-mile course in 4 hours, 57 minutes, 23 seconds. The winner had a corrected time of 4 hours, 58 minutes, 44 seconds, being followed by Astra, Velsheda, Yankee, Shamrock and Canada in the order named. (SPECIAL TO "TELEGRAPH")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphia Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, Aug. 6, 10 a.m.)

Geneva, Aug. 5.
The small nations, comprising the bulk of the League of Nations membership, are outraged at the Italo-Ethiopian compromise arrangement, which is privately termed a weak surrender, dictated by the British, French and Italian influence, instead of by the League as a whole.

It is indicated that unless the issue is settled before the League Assembly meets on September 9, the small nations will force the issue, insisting upon a declaration as to whether the League is to become a real League of Nations or a rubber stamp approving the decisions of the major powers.

The South American, Eastern European and Scandinavian representatives are inclined to demand that the League assert its authority to prevent Italy declaring war, regardless of the consequences to the League's future.—United Press.

(Special to "Telegraph")

London, Aug. 5.

A track duel between two women aces, one of whom broke the Brooklands lap record for two-litre cars the day before, drew thousands of Bank Holiday spectators, especially women, to the famous speedway this afternoon.

The contestants were Mrs. Gwenda Stewart, who yesterday smashed Kaye Don's long-standing record, and Mrs. Katherine Petre.

The rivals were to drive separately over four laps of the track, or about 11 miles, and the fastest single lap would determine the winner.

Mrs. Petre averaged 134.24 miles per hour to Mrs. Stewart's 133.67, but Mrs. Stewart was forced to give up in the second lap owing to her exhaust pipe coming adrift.

Later, the lap record for the course was broken by Oliver Bramham, driving a Barnato Hispania Special at a speed of 142.6 miles per hour.—Reuter Special.

Mauretania Souvenir Hunters

CABINS RANSACKED
BY 10,000

INSPECTION TO BE CURTAILED

Remarkable scenes were witnessed at Rosyth Dockyard, when it was estimated that 10,000 of a 20,000 crowd inspected the Maure-tania, for 22 years holder of the Blue Riband of the Atlantic, and shortly to be broken up.

Unfortunately, the inauguration of a week's public inspection had regrettable results. A number of the visitors, apparently souvenir-hunting, did damage to the liner's fittings, and it has been decided to curtail the facilities to sightseers. Notices prohibiting smoking, too, were sometimes disregarded, and there were several fire alarms, which, luckily, proved to be false.

Seven o'clock in the morning, exactly three days after her arrival at Rosyth, the Mauretania was taken from the large lock, and through the open dock to her berth beside the Bayern, the German battleship which was towed from Scapa Flow to the Firth, upside down.

While it has been held up in the lock, thus imprisoning the tugs which are necessary to manoeuvre it into difficult positions, the liner has cost Metal Industries (Ltd.) about £100 a day.

The process of berthing one of the biggest (if not the biggest) marine visitors to Rosyth, was carried out in ideal weather without a single hitch.

As a considerable number of their employees have not joined in the strike at the shipbreaking yard Metal Industries (Ltd.) had a sufficient staff at their disposal to perform the task.

The Mauretania had not been long in the dock, and the gangway had not been placed in position, when the first sightseers queued up at the dockyard gates. The liner is to be open to public inspection for a week, and the proceeds of the admission charges are being devoted to charities.

2375 FOR CHARITIES

For eleven hours, from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., there was a continuous stream of visitors, and the dockyard was transformed into a gigantic parking place accommodating hundreds of motor cars and omnibuses from all parts of the country.

At no time during the day did the queue at the dockside number less than a thousand, and there was a continual coming and going up and down the gangways.

Many of the visitors sunned themselves on the deck chairs on the promenade decks, while enterprising small boys were to be seen swarming up the masts and rigging.

By four o'clock in the afternoon,
6,000 persons had visited the ship.
The total number admitted during the day was 10,000. The drawings, at the rate of 1s. for adults and 6d. for juveniles, amounted to £375. Altogether, it is estimated that over 20,000 people visited the dockyard.

HYMNARIES DISAPPEAR

It is needless to say that the vast majority of the visitors conducted themselves in exemplary fashion. A number, who gave the impression of being souvenir hunters, however, ransacked the cabins and did considerable damage to panelling, woodwork generally, ropes, and nuts and bolts.

A box of hymnaries, too, one of

Knocked out in a fight, Oosliceanu was placed as dead in Galatz Morgue, and was transferred to the dissecting room of the Anatomical Institute for an operation to determine the exact nature of his injuries so his assailants could be tried.

Just before the surgeon began to cut, Oosliceanu jumped up from the table and ran. He was recaptured in the street and taken to the hospital.—
United Press.

the sightseers said, almost disappeared.

Hundreds, too, ignored notices prohibiting smoking, and as a result of the careless throwing away of cigarette ends and matches, there were several alarms of fire during the day.

Many amateur photographers were disappointed to find a notice posted at the dockyard gates to the effect that all cameras must be left at the police office.

An official of the firm told
The Evening Dispatch that any little thing some of the people could lay their hands on was taken away.

"It was a case of pulling things off here and there," he said, "and the result is that a fair amount of damage has been done to the liner—at least to the amount of £100. The whole thing is ridiculous. A minority on the first day have thus spoilt everyone else who is to visit the Mauretania."

The upshot is, Metal Industries (Ltd.) state, that owing to the damage done by the fittings of the ship they regret that it will be necessary to curtail considerably the privileges extended to the public.

PENELOPE WARD

After only one venture in film acting Penelope Dudley Ward is to become a star. She has been given the leading feminine role in "Natacha," which London Film Productions are making at Wor-ton Hall, near Isleworth.

Miss Ward, who is 20, made her debut with Elisabeth Bergner in "Escape Me Never."

She had wanted to break into films since the age of 15, and was determined take the first opportunity offered to her.

School in London, however, was followed by travelling to various countries to learn the languages.
A two years' stay in Germany was followed by six months in Paris and three in Italy.

Upon her return to London she quickly attracted attention, and received an offer to play in a British film. A few days before she was due to take up this part she had to be operated on for appendicitis, another long delay being inevitable.

When she had recovered, Dr.
Paul Czinner unexpectedly offered her a part in "Escape Me Never," which he was directing, with his wife, Elisabeth Bergner.

The Earl of Athlone deplored the cruelty used in the taking of some animal films when he presided at a meeting in London of the Royal Society for the Pro-

"Films have sometimes been exhibited," he said, "which, while purporting to show wild life, were in fact produced under unnatural conditions, the animals being herded together to make a sensational 'shoot'."

"I am glad to know of the important action recently taken by the British Board of Film Censors in forming a consultative committee for the scrutiny of animal films."

It is announced by Gaumonta glorification of banditry but a biographical document based on

HAPPY HOLIDAYS IN CANADA

Montreal, July 15. WITH the increasing popularity of vacation trips on the Great Lakes, the Canadian Pacific Steamship service to include calls at Port Arthur on westbound voyages as well as eastbound.

The Great Lakes make this continent almost unique for an inland sea voyage, part of which is entirely out of sight of land. Attractions that have been drawing an increasing number of passengers include a change of air, refreshing coolness, magnificent scenery, complete rest, and all the joys of shipboard. The Canadian Pacific Great Lakes steamers this year have been outfitted with deck sports, including quoits, shuffleboard, and deck golf. Dancing and music bring pleasure to the evening hours. The schedule makes it possible to take an enjoyable week's trip, going either way, with overnight stops at both ends. Sailing Saturday, the round trip is completed the following Friday. Sailing Wednesday, the round trip is completed on Monday. The steamers leave Port McNicoll at 5 p.m. on Wednesdays and Saturdays, arriving at Port Arthur at 6.45 a.m. and Fort William at 7.50 a.m. on Mondays and Fridays, in time to connect with train leaving dock at 8 a.m., Eastern Standard Time, making connection with train No. 1 leaving Fort William station for the West at 7.35 a.m., Central Standard Time. On the eastbound trip departure time is 12 noon from Fort William on Saturdays and Wednesdays, 1 p.m. from Port Arthur, arriving in Port McNicoll at 8 a.m., Eastern Standard Time, on Mondays and Fridays. Port Arthur was in the schedule for an eastbound call but the call on the westbound trip has not been in effect for several years.

Attractive all-expense tours at very low cost have been arranged to provide happy combinations of rail trips overland and steamship cruises across the Lakes, with leisurely stop-over at famous vacation resorts. There is a nine-day westbound tour between Toronto and Winnipeg and a ten-day eastbound tour from Winnipeg to Niagara Falls, with return trip in both cases.

CONSTRUCTION OF CRUISERS

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST BUILDERS

SENATE'S REPORT

By RONALD G. VAN TINE, United Press Staff Correspondent, Washington.

Construction of cruisers apparently costs the Government from one to two million dollars more in private yards than in Navy yards, the Senate Munitions Committee reports.

Making another preliminary report of its extensive investigation of Naval construction contracts, the committee headed by Senator, Gerald P. Nye recommended passage of four pending bills. One is designed to prevent collusion in bidding, another to safeguard government military secrets, another to make public activities of shipbuilding lobbyists, and the fourth to prevent profiteering on naval construction.

The 400-page preliminary report listed these general "findings":

1. Some shipbuilders "are certainly not above suspicion of willingness to wave the flag or to circulate war scares in the plain and simple interest of their own pocket-books, regardless of results."

2. Builders should be "definitely policed in any and all moves made by them or through them to confuse public defence needs with their private profits, or they should be cut off entirely from the building of ships for the Navy."

3. Indications are that private yards cost the government from one to two million dollars more per cruiser than Navy yards.

4. The Navy is left at the mercy of shipbuilders in bids on construction.

5. Naval officials make no attempt to determine whether profit limitations set up in the Vinson-Trammell Act are enforced or evaded.

6. If there is no collusion in bidding, "there was a sympathetic understanding among the big companies of each other's desires," and if there were no conversations about bidding among them, "there was telepathy."

7. Shipbuilders "know that the Navy feels it has to have the ships, and they raise the prices."

8. Opposition of private companies to Navy yard construction has been intense.

9. There are "indications of the use by the Navy of the shipbuilders as a lobby for its interests."

10. There is "a clear and definite danger in allowing self-interested groups, such as the shipbuilders and their allied interests, to be in a position of influence, as they are at present, to such an important instrument of national policy as the Navy."

11. There has been "a large amount of bipartisan political activity on the part of the shipbuilders locally, in Congress, and also at the National Headquarters of the two parties."

12. National defence should be "above and separated from lobbying," and "speculators and speculating" should have no part in it.

13. The Vinson-Trammell profit limitations cannot be enforced without a huge police force of accountants.

SCIENCE MAKES FURTHER PROGRESS

San Francisco. Strides of science in aiding persons with both male and female characteristics drew discussion at the recent convention of the American Urological Association.

The most complete report ever presented by an American on the subject was placed before the Convention by Dr. Hugh Hampton Young, noted lecturer of Johns Hopkins University.

An amazing story—highlights of unusual cases histories—comprised the text of Dr. Young's report.

Pointing out that in border-line sex cases there usually is a leaning toward one, Dr. Young told how plastic surgery has been employed to aid unfortunate bisexuals, in many cases eliminating the characteristics of the subordinate sex and developing the dominant.

He recited the case of an 18-year old football player who applied for surgical assistance. Fifty physicians who studied the case discovered the youth to be exactly midway between male and female. His sex could have been established either as male or female by the proper surgical treatment. Finally, after much discussion and a ballot among the consulting doctors, it was decided to destroy the female characteristics and transform him into a normal, healthy man.

The 64-year old surgeon who pioneered in the field of definite sex establishment said in many cases more than a dozen operations, performed over a period of years, were necessary to obtain desired results.

He said sex of a normal child is determined about six weeks after conception, but in abnormal cases the determination is delayed and sometimes never definitely established.—United Press.

AMUSING APPLICATIONS FOR LABELS

"NUDIST'S WHISKY"

By FREDERICK C. OTHMAN

Washington. One distiller who insists on puns, another who hopes to cater to nudists and a third who has his own ideas about the relationship of lovely ladies to strong drink, indicate the type of problems which the Federal Alcohol Administration must solve.

These problems, and similar ones, keep the F.A.C.A. busy, even though it lost most of its power when the Supreme Court clipped the Blue Eagle's wings. The Administration still is giving advice about labels to any liquor manufacturer who applies.

The latest applicant, the punster, wants to make fast gin green. He said that since gin is red, like a traffic light. His gin is green, also like a traffic light. Hence he wants to call it "fast".

The experts got the idea, all right, and even now are deciding whether Americans shall have the opportunity to buy their fast gin green.

Whisky for nudists apparently is ordinary whisky in a bottle to which is affixed a beautiful silver label, upon which is perched a plump and unclothed lady. Above her head is a sign which says "Nudist's Whisky." The F.A.C.A. told the nudist whisky makers to put some clothes on their lady.

Another whisky maker wrote Director Joseph H. Choate from Kentucky, saying he wanted to make "Dream" whisky. The label indicated that the dream concerned wine, women and horse racing, not song. It was red and gold with pictures of a wine glass, a nude girl and a thoroughbred winning a race. The F.A.C.A. said it didn't like that, one, either.

"ROOSEVELT BOURBON"

Neither would it approve a whisky labelled F.D.R., particularly when its distillers said they couldn't remember why they had picked those particular initials.

One of their competitors wanted to make Roosevelt bourbon and another was ready to manufacture Abraham Lincoln rye. They also were turned down. Nor would the officials approve Congress whisky on the theory that customers might think it was the favourite tipple of Congressmen.

Another manufacturer is advertising by means of double entendre hardly suitable for a family newspaper, a cocktail of amazing attributes. The F.A.C.A. says it will crack down on him as soon as Congress restores its crack-down power.

The label division so far has received 36,892 applications for labels, and has acted upon 22,708, approving most of them with modifications. All the approved labels are on file, filling one large room and indicating that it is tougher to name a whisky than a pullman car.—United Press.

DIE FROM INJURIES

Vancouver, Aug. 5.
Mr. David Sloan, managing director of the Pioneer Times, who was travelling with the late Dr. Reginald Brock, the eminent geologist, in an aeroplane which crashed at Alta Lake on July 31st, died in hospital here to-day, from injuries he received in the accident.

Mrs. Brock, wife of Dr. Brock, who was another passenger in the machine has also succumbed to her injuries. This brings the death toll resulting from the crash to four.—Reuter.

This is the first indication that Mrs. Brock was involved in the accident.

Barbara Stanwyck has a new leading man in Gene Raymond, and new film "rival" in charming Genevieve Tobin, which makes her smile. And they smile because they, like the star, have the most dramatic roles of their careers in the First National production "The Woman in Red" which opens at the Alhambra on Wednesday.

PLANNED NATIONAL FINANCE

One of the proposals in Mr. Lloyd George's New Deal plans is that the Bank of England should be placed under the control of a board representing the financial, industrial and commercial relations of the nation. In this respect, the Lloyd George scheme differs from the Labour ideal, which is that the Bank should be completely nationalised. Actually, the Bank of England is a private institution—the only important bank of its kind which has no form of Government control—and one of its most important functions is to control the supply of money in the country. By its control of the bank rate, and in other ways, it determines the amount of money which shall be available to finance business developments. That is a very great power, and there are many who believe that it ought not to be in the hands of a private institution. For the people as a whole, money is not something to be loaned out at a profit; it is the wherewithal to buy the necessities of life. If money is kept scarce, the people cannot buy, and when they cannot buy, other people cannot sell. The result may well be—as is the case nowadays—that although mechanical and scientific achievements are such that the country can produce an increasing number of things which everybody wants, they cannot be distributed to the extent that they should, and the industrial machine accordingly breaks down. The joint stock banks also play their part in this money business. Not only do they decide which industries shall have credit, but they can, as the Macmillan Committee showed, owing to the large amount of business done by cheques, create credit to ten times the amount of cash deposited with them. They can only do this, however, because of the credit and character of the nation as a whole; yet it is often difficult for legitimate sound business concerns, particularly small ones, to obtain the credit they desire, although huge sums are often available for out-and-out speculators. There is an increasing need that the interests of sound industry should come first, and undue speculation be made impossible. It is in recognition of this point that a demand has sprung up

NOTES OF THE DAY

EPIDEMICS

The Health Organisation of the League of Nations has just published some interesting information regarding the influenza epidemic of the early part of this year. These surveys published by the Health Organisation are of very considerable value to doctors and public health authorities in their studies of epidemics and the means of controlling them. When one remembers how many hundreds of thousands and even sometimes millions of people may lose their lives in great epidemics of worldwide dimensions, one realises how necessary it is to encourage medical and scientific research in regard to such problems. The report of the Health Organisation regarding the latest influenza epidemic states that the form of the influenza was unusually mild. It appears to have been more severe in Germany than in most European countries. The number of deaths reported in the great towns is comparable with that recorded in the winter of 1930-31, when the last severe epidemic occurred. In France, we are told, influenza spread to all parts of the country, but the deaths which occurred were mainly amongst people of advanced age, as is usually the case in relatively mild epidemics. The disease took on an exceptionally mild form in Great Britain. In the United States the disease was four to five times more prevalent in 1935 than last year, but the mortality rate was fortunately low. This work of the League, which goes on unknown to the masses, is for the world's good and deserves support and recognition.

WHAT PROTECTION

When Mr. Baldwin announced the National Government's policy of trebling the Air Force, he expressed a hope that there would be no profiteering in connection with the construction of the additional aeroplanes. But he did not say what steps the Government proposed to take to prevent profiteering. On June 26, Dr. Addison asked the Secretary of State for Air what instructions and powers had been given to those appointed to safeguard public interests in regard to the prices to be paid for aircraft supplies. Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister replied that the Government had appointed Sir Hardiman Lever, Mr. P. Ashley Cooper, and Mr. H. C. Judd to "advise" him in this matter, but that no instructions were necessary. Pressed by Dr. Addison to say what powers these gentlemen would have, the Minister said he did not think any special powers were needed at the present time. "I absolutely refuse to accept the suggestion," he said, "that the country and I are not going to be met in a reasonable way by the industry of this country, until the contrary has been proved."

WHAT DEALERS THINK

Meanwhile, what the dealers in aeroplane shares think about the effect of the Government's expansion policy can be seen from the following news item which appears in the Daily Telegraph on June 7: "Yesterday's outstanding feature in a cheerful Stock Exchange session was a sensational, and rather unedifying, rush to acquire the newly-introduced 10s. Ordinary Shares of the Bristol Aeroplane Company. These shares were purchased by a leading firm of stockbrokers on the basis of 87s. 6d. Yesterday, on their first day of quotation, they actually touched 57s. 6d. before closing at 56s. 3d." The City Editor of the Daily Telegraph commented that this rise in the share prices was "in unfortunate contrast to the stand which the Government has taken against profiteering in the aircraft industry," but he admitted that the shares in question "were not altogether inaccurately assessed by the vendors and the 'broking house.'" He concluded with a warning to investors to beware against "being led into a dangerous market by the glamour shed upon aircraft shares by the recent Government decision to increase the Royal Air Force."

for the creation of a National Investment Board, under Government aegis, to make finance the true servant of the nation. In short, reformers, including Mr. Lloyd George and the Labour Party, seek nationally-planned and controlled finance, to ensure that as the nation's ability to produce increases, so shall consuming power rise to enable everyone to benefit from the industrial advance. Whether it is possible to secure a realisation of this ideal remains to be seen, but the importance of the subject is beyond dispute.

HOW TO KEEP COOL IN ENGLAND!

By DR. BETTY MORGAN

THERE are many different theories about the best way to do it. Down in Devonshire the country people have a saying that what keeps out the cold keeps out the heat. According to this idea, we should all muffle ourselves up in great-coats when the thermometer takes a leap upward. After all, in very hot countries, the natives are inclined to act that way.

The Indian envelops his head in the voluminous folds of a turban. The Arab wears his heavy white burnous in the scorching heat of the desert day and the biting cold of the desert night.

It may even be that the city clerk who wears his navy blue suit in July and January alike does not suffer any more from the heat than the bathing beauty who lies for hours in the sun with the irreducible minimum of covering.

Always providing that the city clerk does not wear a tight collar. There, at least, is one fairly safe rule for hot weather, and none the less convincing because it might equally well apply to cold weather.

We are only just beginning to realise that the production of ideal heat and ideal cold both depend to a large extent upon the free circulation of air. Cellular blankets are warmer than the solid variety. An open neck in winter is often more warming than a muffler. And if it is true that a fire thrives on air it is also true that refrigerators never work properly unless there is ample ventilation above and around them.

So, if we want to keep cool, we must allow for the free passage of air around our bodies. We should never wear anything tight about the neck, waist, and feet. A tight shoe, most of us will painfully remember, is a hot shoe, whatever the weather. As long as our summer clothes are loose, the material of which they are made is of secondary importance.

After the problem of what to wear the problem of what to drink is the main preoccupation of hot summer afternoons.

There are two schools of thought upon this subject. One believes that we should fight heat with heat—eat curry, drink hot tea, have hot baths. For myself, I decide against the curry and the hot baths, but have not the least hesitation in recommending hot tea with lemon in it as the most cooling of all summer drinks.

Ices and ice drinks have a nasty habit of warming you up later. They stimulate your inside much as a cold bath stimulates your outside.

On the subject of baths, earnest experiment convinces me that the ideal bath for a sweltering day is neither hot nor cold, but tepid. This is a personal discovery, which I pass on for what it may be worth. If you are very hot, and there is no bath available, it is a good plan to run tepid water from a tap over the wrists.

As for exercise, I have never understood why the laws of convention demand that we should play really strenuous games like tennis in the full blaze of a summer sun. All sane human instincts are against excessive exercise in the heat. The best advice for holiday-makers in a heat-wave is to take things slowly. Summer days were meant for short spells in the sunlight and longer spells in the shade. And both spells should be easy.

If you happen to find yourself unbearably hot, and have neither a tepid bath to drop into, nor a cool bed to lie upon, the only thing to do is to find a spot of shade and to sit in it, quite still, for at least half an hour.

Sea-bathing as a means of keeping cool can be overdone. Except for special cases (principally people with weak hearts), nothing is healthier than a sea-bathe on a sunny day, providing:

1. That you don't stay in too long.
2. That you don't let the sun beat down upon your unprotected head.
3. That you don't exercise yourself beyond your real strength.
4. That you don't lie about in the sun for hours, immediately after coming out of the sea, unless you have really acclimatised yourself to it.

Few things can be more unpleasant than a sunstroke after a sea-bathe, and hardly anything can be so thoroughly enfeebling as an overdose of the briny.

Thanks to persistent newspaper and wireless propaganda, most people now have a fairly good idea of how to behave in hot weather—what to eat, what to wear, how to treat the sun, and when to exercise.

When it comes to the actual cooling of houses, however, there is still a great deal to be done, both in theory and in practice. Seeing that human beings are unfortunately unable to order a cool breeze every time the house gets hot and stuffy, the only sensible solution is an electric fan. Indeed, it is high time that architects provided houses with electric fans as part of their normal equipment. They are just as important in the dog days as central heating is in the cold of January.

Meantime, there is still a lot to be said for the ordinary fan. As an addition to the amenities of our bathing beaches the fan has distinct possibilities. Anyone who doubts that may consider the following extract from a letter written by Benjamin Disraeli in Spain to his mother in England during the hot summer of 1830:

"The fan is the most wonderful part of the whole scene. A Spanish lady with her fan might shame the tactics of a whole troop of horse. Now she unfurls it with the slow pomp and conscious elegance of a peacock. Now she flutters it with all the languor of a flitting beauty, now with all the liveliness of a vivacious one."

"You know that it speaks a particular language and gallantry requires no other mode to express its most subtle conceits or its most unreasonable demands than this slight, delicate organ."

"But remember, while you read, that here, as in England, it is not confined alone to your delightful sex. I also have my fan, which makes my cane extremely jealous. Perhaps, if the enterprising youth of Blackpool and Bournemouth took to fanning itself on the promenades, dress reform for men would follow as a matter of course."

Always try not to gain any more in one week than I can reduce in the next.

The Very Idea!

SENSE OR NONSENSE

It's All The Same To This Unconscious Humourist

By Eddie "Ratbag" Kelly

HOW would you like to earn $2,500 in the newspaper game like Edward Kelly or some other big journalist? You would, would you? Well, so would Kelly.

Become a humourist. It will serve you right.

There are only a few simple rules to follow. If you follow them there's no telling where you'll end up. Maybe in gaol, who knows?

One of the easiest ways of breaking into a newspaper office is to use a burglar's outfit.

Another way is through the use of expensive gifts. This may fail, but there's no harm in trying. Besides, who hasn't failed since the dollar rose? Anyway, send around a Rolls Royce or Chrysler to Eddie Kelly with your card in it. Tell him you can write funny stuff. You may get a job right away if there's an opening. If there's not, keep on sending the expensive gifts.

One of the best ways we've ever heard of is the sincerity way. Sincerity is the big thing in becoming a successful journalist. With sincerity you can get anywhere. But, of course, you've got to have courage too. Sincerity without courage will get you nowhere, especially with some Editors we know.

Still, sincerity and courage without faith will do you no good either. You might as well give up. That's it—sincerity, courage, faith and, of course, hope. Hope is the big thing.

But who ever heard of Faith and Hope without Charity? So we would suggest sincerity, faith, hope, courage and charity.

But where can you get on charity? You've got to have money. Sincerity, faith, hope, courage, charity and money. Yes, with money you can get anywhere, even in newspaper work. All you have to do is buy your own newspaper.

Forgive Us Our Debts

Believe it or not, we went to Church last Sunday. With Pete Whalseth. It was the anniversary of his wedding, or something, and his headachio had insisted that he go along. As we were best man at his wedding, we were dragged into the party, too.

When the collection plate was passed, old Pete kept his eyes on the ceiling.

"I should think you'd be ashamed of yourself, Pete," said Mrs. W. after the service. "You didn't put a thing in the collection plate."

"I can't afford it," confessed Pete. "Besides, it wouldn't be fair to the people in Hongkong I already owe money to. Why do you know I owe money to hat the tradespeople in the Colony?"

"I know, I know," replied his wife impatiently, "but surely you also owe something to the Lord."

"I know that," replied Pete frankly, "but the Lord isn't pressing me like the rest of my creditors."

Dead

"Well, you must admit that Hongkong is much cleaner than Shanghai," said the Peak resident to the visitor from the north. "Look how well it's laid out."

"It ought to be," retorted the Shanghaiander, "it's been dead for ages."

Ah, Mr. Kelly

Not long ago we met a girl who went in for this Pelmanism, you know, thinking of another word with which you can associate the word or name you want to remember. The best way is to rhyme a word.

When we first met her we were introduced to her as Mr. Kelly. We met her in the street next day.

"How do you do, Mr. Stummick," she gushed.

Eye'll Say So

Eyes that send a glad "Come hither!"

Eyes that set my pulse a-dither.

Eyes that "trot" love's feet a-dither.

Eyes that, too, can scorn and wither.

Eyes that promise "I'll be home."

Ready as old Flemish wine.

Eyes that make a wet day dry.

Eyes that never can be dry.

Eyes that cause me to be dry.

Eyes that cause me to be dry.

MODERN GERMAN PAGANISM

POPE DEPLORES PERSECUTION

MESSAGE TO CATHOLICS

(Special to "Telegraph")

Vatican City, Aug. 5. His Holiness the Pope today spoke on "modern paganism" and the persecution of the Roman Catholics in Germany when he received a group of young German Catholics at the Vatican.

It was a sad thing for him to think of the struggle maintained against God and Christ, said His Holiness, in this modern campaign of paganism.

On the other hand it was a joyful thing to think that in Germany there were so many young men who were pious and strong in their faith.

"Never lose courage," he said. "Be ready and strong in your faith and confident in God."—Reuter Special.

The United Press adds that Pope Pius addressed fifty German pilgrims who visited the Vatican. He blessed all the Catholic Germans who were "so gallantly battling in defence of their faith in the present difficult times."

"But harder times may come," he added.

WIFE CHARGES HUSBAND

ALLEGED FAILURE TO MAINTAIN

Tang Sul-lam, of 127 and 174 Lockhart Road, Wanchai, appeared before Mr. Macfadyen at the Central Magistracy this morning on a summons for wilfully neglecting to provide maintenance for his wife, Li Kam-ling, and his children, on various dates between November 7 last year and July 18.

Mr. M. A. da Silva appeared for the complainant, while the defendant was represented by Mr. C. E. R. Sanderson.

Mr. Silva said that about September 4 the defendant wrote to the complainant in the country accusing her of having a sweetheart and stated that he would have nothing further to do with her. He did not want her back again.

After a while, she returned to the Colony and had several interviews with the defendant, in the first of which he flatly refused to provide maintenance and threw a book at her. On another occasion he threw a Chinese calculating board and hit her.

UNAVAILING PLEAS

The complainant's daughter pleaded on behalf of her mother and the defendant's father also pleaded but to no avail.

The defendant went one step further and ordered the cook at the shop not to cook food, with the consequence that complainant and her children had to eat elsewhere. She then hired a bedpace at 8 Gutzlaff Street, after which she went to the S. C. A. In the first interview the defendant was advised to take more care of her, but he paid no heed and the Secretary then ordered him to pay $30 maintenance, which he refused.

Complainant was the defendant's wife and had been married to him for 30 years. They had three children, two daughters and a son.

Evidence was then called. The case is proceeding.

FOOL-PROOF BALLOON

URNS ITSELF TO PARACHUTE

(Special to "Telegraph")

Moscow, August 5. The newly-invented aerostat, which is a combination balloon and parachute, was successfully tested today.

It climbed to 17,000 feet and there the occupants released the gas. Immediately the envelope deflated, turned itself into a parachute contrivance and allowed the experimenters to slide gently to earth.—Reuter Special.

A police report stated that a raid was made at 38 Monkong Road yesterday, resulting in the arrest of four Chinese men and the seizure of one automobile. The raid was conducted by the police station do-

JAPAN PROTEST DELIVERED

WASHINGTON CAUTIOUS IN REPLY

Washington, Aug. 5.

The Japanese Ambassador, Mr. Saito, has made representations to the State Department regarding the cartoon which appeared in a recent issue of Vanity Fair, depicting the Japanese Emperor pulling a gun-carriage on which was mounted a scroll of the Nobel Peace Prize under the caption, "Unlikely Historical Situations."

The Ambassador declared that the cartoon was derogatory to the Emperor and to the Japanese people, and the Japanese people felt the insult keenly.

Replying to the Japanese protest, Mr. Cordell Hull, the Secretary of State, said he regretted the incident but pointed out that the Government exercised no censorship upon the press and was in no way responsible for anything published.

"The Emperor ought to see some of the others I have done and am doing," said William Cropper, the originator of the cartoon.

"Several countries, including Germany, have outlawed publications using my work. I am grateful to Japan for giving 'class' to my list of objectors to my work which now consists of one Labour leader, several capitalists and one Emperor," he smiled.—Reuter.

AMERICAN REGRET

Washington, August 5. The Japanese Ambassador made informal representations to Mr. Cordell Hull in respect of the Vanity Fair caricature, and left the State Department apparently satisfied, believing he had obtained a direct expression of regret.

However, it is understood that the Secretary of State avoided a direct expression of regret, and only cautiously said that he was sorry that the cartoon had been misunderstood in Japan.

The State Department has issued a statement, saying: "The Secretary of State in reply to representations relative to material in the current issue of a periodical referred to a reported statement by the periodical saying there was no intention of giving offence."

"The Secretary of State said he was always sorry when incidents were misunderstood."

(By Telegraph Copyright, Telegraphic Magazine Ordinance, 1921. Received, August 5, 5 a.m.)

Athens, August 5.

The Government has received a message from General Baccopoulos, in charge of the Government forces in Crete, stating that order has been restored and that the strikers are now dispersing peacefully.

But the revolt in Candia, led by labour radicals and joined by Liberal sympathisers and friends of the exiled Greek leader, Venizelos, cost several lives, a large number of wounded and immense property loss.

General Baccopoulos states further that his forces have surrounded Candia and that he has demanded the submission of the strikers. He had received deputations and had heard their claims.

Later the strikers capitulated. It is believed that the total casualties of the affray are three killed and 20 wounded on the side of the insurgents, and 17 men of the Government forces wounded.

JUVENILE CONCERT AT SHAMEEN

TINY ARTISTES IN BIG SUCCESS

The Portuguese community of Shameen, numbering about forty, gathered at the newly-formed Portuguese Club on Sunday to attend a juvenile concert, given under the able personal direction of Madame Osmund, wife of the Treasurer of the Club.

Before the concert commenced tea was served and the President of the Club, Mr. Carlos Gomes, announced the receipt of a telegram from the Portuguese Consul of Canton, who happened to be in Hongkong, regretting his inability to be with them and sending his best wishes for the success of the event.

The hall of the Club, which was kindly lent for the occasion, and its improvised stage, were tastefully and gaily decorated by members of the Club, under the supervision of Mr. H. Prata, to resemble a fairland.

The programme was carried through without a hitch, and every thing was received with loud applause, encores being demanded from the little artistes, who were all under the age of six.

Particular mention must be made of Miss Ani Gomes, the talented daughter of the President of the Club. Her impersonations of Miss Shirley Temple, singing and leading her chorus "On the Good Ship Lollipop," left nothing to be desired. Another item which was deservedly applauded and encores was the "Isle of Capri." This was very beautifully rendered by Master Tony Osmund, accompanied by the ensemble. This versatile little show boy is the son of Madame Osmund, who not only organised the concert but was also responsible for the beautifully designed costumes. Great credit is due to her for the time and labour spent in coaching the little ones.

At the end of the performance, the little ones were presented with baskets of flowers and mementoes of the occasion, by Mrs. P. M. Remedios.

The President, on behalf of the Committee and members of the Club, thanked Madame Osmund, the little artistes, and all connected with the performance. During the intervals, Mr. Julio Rozario rendered popular music on the piano while after the performance dancing was indulged in.

Mr. C. Remedios, of 589 Nathan Road, has reported to the police that his dog bit Mr. A. Carvalho, of 8 Salisbury Avenue, while visiting him. The dog was named Mateus for observation, while Mr. Carvalho was medically treated.

Do Not Neglect Rheumatism!

Had Mr. Gordon Taylor Purified And Enriched His Blood With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Earlier He Would Have Been Suffered Several Years Suffering

It is unfortunate for rheumatic sufferers when they try to ignore the early signs of this painful malady, or waste time and money on wrong treatments.

Mr. Gordon Taylor, of Wentworthville, N.S.W., Australia, has authorised the publication of the following statement in the hope that it will save many who are afflicted with rheumatic ailments the long years of suffering he endured.

"Some years ago I suffered from poverty of blood and developed muscular rheumatism," states Mr. Taylor. "I could hardly lift up my arms, my joints and muscles were so stiff and painful. It was sheer agony to move or walk. For three years I suffered and tried many remedies without relief."

"At last a colleague recommended me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After taking a few bottles the pains grew less and I could get about much better. I kept on with the pills and am now entirely free from the stiffness and aches of rheumatism."

"The root cause of rheumatism, so to effect a cure the blood must be purified, built-up, enriched. It is because they do exactly this that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have earned their world-wide reputation as a remedy for rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, as well as for anaemia and general debility in both sexes. Of chemists everywhere."

THE DAYS BEFORE THE VOLLEY WAS INTRODUCED

WIMBLEDONS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

SOME INTERESTING COMMENTS BY
N. L. (PA) JACKSON

THE RENSHAW BROTHERS INTRODUCE NEW STYLE OF PLAY

Mr. N. L. Jackson, the doyen of referees, and first editor of Pastime, the predecessor of Lawn Tennis and Badminton on Wimbledon of the 'eighties to the development of the modern game which he has watched during his sixty years' association with lawn tennis.

It is a far cry to the 1880's, when the twin brothers Renshaw showed how attractive lawn tennis could be made, he writes. Until their advent the game consisted of very long rallies by players at the baseline. Volleying was looked upon as "bad form," and in many "garden party" matches was not permitted. The earlier Championships at Wimbledon were also practically confined to strokes made after the ball had touched the ground. The chief players sought to cultivate pace and accuracy and endeavoured to keep their opponents on the run. This meant also interminable rallies which were distressing to those players who were not in excellent condition.

When, however, the Renshaws, who had developed their game by constant practice in the old covered court at Cheltenham in the winter, and on grass in the summer, entered for the Championships, they quickly revolutionized the game, firstly by group up to the net and volleying and afterwards by introducing the overhead "smash," much to the horror of the veterans who declared that it would ruin the game. Such prophecies were soon dispelled, for the Renshaws so livened the play that it became far more attractive to spectators and the younger players, and to them is due the credit for the world-wide popularity of lawn tennis at the present time.

AN OBSTINATE OPPONENT

It was, however, not without a struggle that the twin brothers succeeded, for they had a very capable and obstinate opponent in H. F. Lawford, who in addition to gaining the game and for some time undaunted to prove that it could hold its own against the volley. Lawford was a tremendously hard hitter and very accurate, frequently placing his strokes on the side lines and near the baseline, but the clever smashes and volleying of the Renshaws at length overcame him, and he reluctantly admitted that the net-play was too good for him.

Lawn tennis was also fortunate in its chief lady players in its days. Foremost among these was Miss Maud Watson, the first lady champion, who combined a mastery of the game with a kindly and sporting disposition, which made her a model for her sex. She was followed as champion by Miss Lottie Dod, another perfect sports-woman, with a wonderful record for in addition to gaining the highest honours at lawn tennis, she won the ladies' golf championship, was captain of the English ladies' hockey team, and was facile principessa at skating and archery. Miss Blingley, afterwards Mrs. Hillyard, was a very fine ball player, and won her championships as much by determination as skill, while Miss Douglass, now Mrs. Lambert Chambers, established a record of seven championships, which is still unbeaten.

R. L. Howland the old Blue and English native record holder in the weight, will be team manager and competing captain of the Oxford and Cambridge party that is to visit South Africa in the autumn.

Unfortunately J. E. Lovelock is unable to make the journey and A. W. Sweeney (R.A.F.) is to be included as neither of the Oxford or Cambridge sprint first string will be able to go. The South Africans are anxious to see A. G. K. Brown, the young Cambridge Freshman, who has been breaking so many records. The team will be:

R. L. Howland (Cambridge), A. G. K. Brown (Cambridge), M. J. K. Sullivan (Cambridge), A. G. Pihlow (Oxford), J. C. Horsfall (Cambridge), J. A. Judson (Oxford), F. B. Webster (Cambridge), W. T. Squires (Oxford) and A. W. Sweeney (R.A.F.).

Bowls Singles Contest

POSTPONED MATCH TO-DAY

There is only one match down for decision in the local Lawn Bowls Championship for this afternoon, this being between T. Armstrong, of the Civil Service C.C., and H. A. Alves, the Club de Recreio player.

This fixture was arranged for July 23 but owing to Armstrong developing a poisoned foot the game had to be postponed. It is to be played on the Kowloon C.C. green and is in the quarter-finals of the Open Singles Championship.

Last week's rain has further delayed the local Lawn Tennis Championships and the competitions again threaten to drag out unduly. This afternoon, however, the "A" Division matches which are scheduled should be carried through as there seems every prospect that the weather will remain good. The programme for to-day is as follows:

HELEN MOODY TO DEFEND

WIMBLEDON TITLE NEXT YEAR

HELEN JACOBS NOT TO PLAY

(By STANLEY N. DOUST)

London, July 8.
"I hope to play again at Wimbledon next year and defend my title," said Mrs. Helen Willis Moody yesterday.

She is now the women's champion for the seventh time, and has equaled the achievement of Mrs. Lambert Chambers, but she must become "Queen of Tennis" once more to establish a record. Mrs. Moody's magnificent victory over Miss Jacobs by 6-3, 3-6, 7-5 in the final of the women's singles on Saturday, after it seemed certain she would lose, was the talk of the sporting world.

Miss Jacobs led by 5-2 in the first set, and had match point at 5-3—only to lose. It was one of the most brilliant matches ever seen, and both women deserved to win.

At the end Mrs. Moody delightedly flung her racket into the air. Usually she expresses no emotion on the court; but she had cause for her elation then. Her return to the tennis throne was a wonderful achievement, though she modestly declared: "I think I was lucky."

HER FOUR DEFEATS

Miss Helen Jacobs said she was doubtful whether she would play again next year. "I would like to," she said, "but I have been over here so many times and have lost in four finals. Your people may become tired of seeing me and look on me as just a player who cannot win."

"I thought the crowd were very generous to me, and though I lost I am glad I played well. Mrs. Moody made a wonderful recovery in that last set."

The two Helens came from the same town in California. Mrs. Willis Moody is 29 and Miss Jacobs 26. They learned their tennis at the same club, and when Miss Willis (as she was then) first won her own national championship Miss Jacobs won the junior national championship.

They have met three times in the final at Wimbledon—in 1929, 1932, and on Saturday Mrs. Willis Moody won the first finals by 6-2, 6-1—the same scores in each year.

Altogether she has played in eight Wimbledon finals, and has won seven.

AMERICAN SERVERS SUPERIOR

TO OTHER TENNIS PLAYERS

SECRET OF THEIR SUCCESS

Many people go to Wimbledon with the express purpose of trying to fathom the secret of the superiority of the American servers.

Unless the head is correctly poised at the beginning and at the end of the service, you will never learn an American service, says Lawn Tennis and Badminton. The throw up and the balance of the front arm can be copied from photographs, but after the throw-up the left arm, when balanced parallel to the ground, points in the direction you intend to serve to. As the ball and racket meet the body weight is brought forward by means of its levers—the head and arms. If the front arm is not made to do its proper share of this weight transfer, loss of power will result, and eventually you will suffer from shoulder strain. Don't throw the ball up too high. You should meet it at the hanging point, which is just before it begins to fall. Don't stand square when serving. At the bottom of the swing, turn the racket face to the rear. If you want the ball to go to your opponent's forehand meet it on the right side, and vice versa. You should have at least two kinds of service. One of the principal objects of the server is to force his opponent out of position.

W. T. Tilden:—"In sport, timing, through the medium of footwork, can be learned so well that it becomes almost second nature."

George M. Lott:—"The use of the job is neglected to such an extent in these days that it causes me occasionally to burst into tears!"

J. Parnly Paret:—"The change of pace and the change of twist are almost as important as the direction

FOOTBALLERS AT TENNIS

Taking Part In London Championship

Arsenal, Brentford, Chelsea, Charlton, Tottenham Hotspur, Fulham, and West Ham have entered for the London professional football club lawn tennis championship at the North London Hard Courts Club from August 8 to 10.

AS PLAYED BY THE CHAMPIONS

LAWN TENNIS PUBLICATION

HINTS GIVEN BY THE STARS

"Lawn Tennis as Played by the Champions," edited by S. Wallis Merriew, and published by American Lawn Tennis, is, as the editor remarks in his foreword, a tremendous improvement on last year's publication.

"Glimpses of the Tennis Stars in Prose and Pictures" would be an apt description of this interesting handbook for those who want to improve their lawn tennis. The well chosen cinematographic photographs will dispel many fallacies and I hope shatter many false illusions and theories of both players and critics, writes G. Blake Gardell.

How often have you been told never to drop the hand of the racket below the wrist? Being of a credulous nature and not endowed with an analytical brain, you accepted the theory without comment. Of course what these experts really mean is: you are to keep the racket behind the wrist until contact in all strokes except the lob. The photographs in this book are in themselves an education. You cannot but admire and marvel at the power and perfect timing of E. J. Perry's forehand drive. The beautiful head poise and arm balance of Crawford. The knee work and graceful body balance of S. B. Wood. I should advise all would-be servers to study the photo showing the powerful service of Lester Stofen, the effortless one of Sidney Wood, and the classic example of the American cannon-ball service.

HANS NUSSLEIN

Those who did not avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing that great Continental artist, Hans Nusslein at Wimbledon last year, and only know of him by report, will now be able to study his methods as depicted by the camera. The technique of Cochet's smash is demonstrated in eight photos. The head poise, arm balance and footwork reveal the secrets of the great French champion's success in killing a smash. Cochet is equally at home when discussing "Court Tactics and the Theory of Angles."

F. J. Perry, Wilmer Allison, W. T. Tilden, George Lott, J. Parnly Paret, Vincent Richards and Mercer Benley all contribute to make this annual one of the most useful and interesting publications I have ever read. I especially recommend it to my fellow coaches.

SOME EXTRACTS

The pictures alone will convince your pupils of the soundness of your theories. Space prevents me from saying all I want to about this work; you must be content with the following extracts:

F. J. Perry:—"I am a firm believer in speed as a fundamental of the game. Get well down to the ball; your knees were given to you for that purpose."

Wilmer L. Allison:—"Footwork is just as important in volleying as it is in making a ground stroke. Never half-volley or low volley a ball when you can get in and take it higher. Fortunately the smash is the easiest of all strokes to execute!"

W. T. Tilden:—"In sport, timing, through the medium of footwork, can be learned so well that it becomes almost second nature."

George M. Lott:—"The use of the job is neglected to such an extent in these days that it causes me occasionally to burst into tears!"

J. Parnly Paret:—"The change of pace and the change of twist are almost as important as the direction

DRIVER'S TILT WITH DEATH

GERMAN MOTORIST
LOSES WHEEL

ENDURANCE TEST
AT ADENAN

Adenan, July 28.
Tense excitement prevailed among the 200,000 enthusiasts assembled at the Nuerburging to see the "Grosser Preis von Deutschland," the Grand Prix of Germany, the most interesting German motor race of the whole year, as, unlike the racing on the Avus track at Berlin, where the tests concern speed only, the Nuerburging, which is an artificially constructed track with many curves, twists, hills and declines, is also a test of practical utility and durability under difficult conditions.

Among the spectators were the chief of the German automobile sport, Huehnein, regional leader Bruckner, personal adjutant of Chancellor Hitler, as well as Secretary of State Koenig and Ministerial Director Brandenburg, both of the Reichs Traffic Ministry.

The chief favourite for the race was the German racing driver, Manfred von Brauchitsch, who was using a Mercedes-Benz car. He justified this opinion and after a brilliant performance was nearing the finishing line half a minute ahead of the Italian champion and seemed sure of success, when in the last round his left back tyre burst and the wheel fell off completely, so that he could only finish the race at a crawl.

The final result was that Nuvolari finished first, Hans Stuck on Autounion second, Carraciola on Mercedes-Benz third, Rosemeyer on Autounion fourth, while von Brauchitsch, putting up a remarkable performance, came in fifth in spite of his mishap.

As all tonight's papers declare, nobody begrudges Nuvolari his hard-won victory, even though, but for von Brauchitsch's mishap, he would only have scored second place.

When Huehnein presented the winners with their prizes this evening, he expressed his hearty congratulations and acknowledgment of Nuvolari's success, declaring that German sportsmen were always ready to recognise a splendid and honest achievement such as this.

NUVOLARI'S DIFFICULTY

A curious fact is that Nuvolari himself seemed to have difficulties with his machine and for a moment dropped back to sixth place, only recovering the lost ground later with a great effort.

Carraciola also had his share of bad luck. He led the whole field for nine rounds and at the end of the first round was a full 12 seconds ahead, so that engine trouble seemed to have been general.

At daybreak the mountains were completely wrapped in clouds, but rain fell just before the race started, the wet track and bad weather preventing the reaching of record speeds.

The times for the first three cars were Nuvolari: four hours, eight minutes 10.1/5 seconds, which means an average of 121.10 kilometres per

Miss Stella Walsh, the noted runner, broke the world record for the 200 metres to-day when she beat her own previous time by one fifth of a second.

Japanese Swimmers Do
Well In Trials

Tokyo, Aug. 5.
The American swimmers, who are now in the country in preparation for their International Meet against the best of Japanese aquatic stars on August 17 and 19, were guests at a tea-party at the Japanese Foreign Office to-day.

In Sunday's elimination contests, which were watched by the Americans, Hiroshi Negami created a new record for the 400 metres, which he covered in 4 mins. 45 4/5 secs. Reiso, another famous Japanese swimmer, made a new world mark when he negotiated the 100 metres breast stroke in 1 min. 18 secs.

The weather is now considerably cooler and permits strenuous practice. When the Americans first arrived here, the weather was so warm that they were unable to sleep at night with the result that they could not go in for strenuous practice. They had to be content with a daily swim and light training.—United Press.

small stands, one reserved for members and the Press, the other for the public, a third was added later, but the south side was uncovered and served as a good position for the scoring board. Nearly all the spectators went by train from Waterloo, having a long walk by the side of the railway from Wimbledon station. During the championships the attendance of smartly dressed ladies, and men in frock coat and top hats, would amount to a thousand or so, very different to the huge crowds which are now attracted by this event, although the play there was quite as good as it now is.

The Renshaw dominated the games for many years, but on one occasion the champion (William) had a very narrow escape. This happened when he was playing H. S. Barlow, who wanted but a stroke to win, when the Renshaw stumbled and dropped his racket, after making along on hands and knees to retrieve his weapon. Barlow could have "smashed" the ball and gained a victory, but he advanced laughingly, evidently amused by his opponent's difficulty, and simply patted the ball over the net. The champion, with extraordinary agility, regained his feet and his racket, returned the ball and won the rally and afterwards the match. Truly an amazing recovery!

Barlow was a fine all round sportsman, being first class at cricket and billiards and good enough at croquet to win the championship and, above all a cheery and congenial companion. His brother-in-law, Harry Grove, was also a first class player, and these two, with W. C. Taylor and later H. G. B. Chapman, were denied the highest honours of the game, simply because of the brilliancy of the Renshaws, who would, I believe, have easily mastered all the new strokes that have been introduced to the game since their days, and had "knock out" prevented them from keeping their form. In proof of this I may mention that when Dr. Dwight and R. D. Sears, the doubles champions of the United States, paid their first visit to this country, the former, who was of short stature, used to return the ball while it was rising, holding the racket at arms length with the face turned slightly downwards. This stroke was a novelty here, but the Renshaws, having once seen it, copied it perfectly after a brief "knock out," and used it more effectively than its originators.

THE LAST CENTURY

The leading players of the last century were all well-to-do, and paid all their own expenses, except occasionally when a few accepted invitations to be "put-up" for open tournaments by good natured hosts, who were desirous of making their meetings successful. The competitors who made a round of the tournaments spent a considerable sum in pursuit of their pleasure, and the prizes they gained were not of much value. The "cracks" of the present day have luxurious tours abroad, play at all the principal tournaments at home, win valuable prizes, and have all their expenses paid by a generous Lawn Tennis Association when they are officially selected to represent their country.

These new conditions have evolved an entirely different class of competitors to those of the earlier days, when all paid their own expenses.

POPULARISING THE GAME

The annual visits of the Renshaws to the Hotel Beau Site at Cannes was undoubtedly the cause of the enormous success of lawn tennis at all the Riviera resorts, where it was well established long before any open tournaments were started elsewhere on the Continent. The energy of Lady Wood at Boulogne initiated the first tournament there, while the geniality and tact of Sir George Dinitze established the Dinard week which remained one of the best and most popular of the Continental meetings for many years.

As I was engaged to referee at both of those fixtures, and have acted in a similar capacity at St. Servan, Pabane Cabourg, Baden, Ostend and Le Touquet, all of which were well supported by the best English and Continental players, I am glad to say that the game in England from early in May until these foreign meetings commenced in September, and this programme continued for about twenty years, my knowledge of the players and the game is fairly complete. It has been my good fortune to be long enough to see lawn tennis grow from the garden-party stage until it has become more popular all over the world than any other sport except, perhaps, football.

Arriving To-morrow With His Wife

Sergeant T. J. Hemaley, of the Hongkong Police Force, is returning to the Colony to-morrow aboard the

P. and O. liner Nalders, accompanied by his wife, formerly Miss Betty Ratcliff, whom he married while on Home leave.

Prior to joining the local Police in the latter part of 1929, Sergeant Hemaley held no mean record in the athletic world in England. In 1927 he won the Kent County cross-country championship and in 1928 he was teamed with Sam Ferris, of Great Britain, in the London to Brighton five mile relay. In the same year

Hemaley ran fourth to D. G. A. Lowe in the half mile event at the London Championships.

In his last public appearance in England in 1929, he won the Droper and Drapery Times one mile trophy for the third year in succession. Within a month of his arrival in the Colony, he participated in the Hongkong University open half mile race, and in 1930 won the open mile event at the Sacred Heart College sports.

CHAPTER XL

Katharine hadn't wanted, really, to go on the motor trip with the Millards. Dirk Millard and his hand-picked resourceful, tannish Hilda had been very insistent, however. It was to be a two-day picnic in the mountains. Oh, but they often did it! And they were going east soon—Dirk was having a show in Fifth Avenue, and this would be his last chance. Miss Stryker really wanted to come. Evelyn Vincent, too. Frank Millard, Dirk's big, handsome brother, a football player at Berkeley, was going along. Frank had "fallen for" Katharine, Hilda said enthusiastically. The party would simply be spoiled if Katharine did not come.

More to please Evelyn than for any other reason, the girl had consented. Frank Millard's attentions were not unpleasant; indeed, she found herself liking the big fellow with the rich, scalloped, golden hair and the beautiful profile.

She went. They had tents and bedding rolls; they had a de luxe equipment of cups and plates and spoons and forks, all neatly fitted into a great leather case strapped on the side of the big touring car. There was space in the trunk at the back for their few bags. It was all very gay and casual and Bohemian.

After the sun of Roanoke the green of the mountains was cool and grateful. Streams tinkled in unexpected places. Dirk broiled bacon and made coffee and Hilda asked Frank to open jars of calvay and produced salted crackers and jellies from nowhere. A de luxe picnic.

They had their sketching things and the days were full, what with trout fishing and chatter and bathing in crystal-cool rivers and playing Dirk's pet gramophone which went with him wherever he went.

"He took it with him to Russia last year," Hilda said. "Imagine, my dear Russia!" She talked incessantly, spreading her hands, punctuating all her sentences and smiles. Almost, in this amusing company, Katharine forgot what the summer and the early days of autumn had been like. She enjoyed it and thought she wished it could go on forever.

Frank Millard worshiped her with his eyes and his inarticulate words. The others smiled on them benignly, as though they saw romance blossoming and were glad of it.

The two days passed serenely enough. There had never been such clear days and sunsets. The food was marvellous. You slept eight long hours, wrapped in an army blanket, and woke to dash your face with cool mountain water and fall wolfishly on toast and coffee and eggs and bacon.

But the Millards were not so placidly happy. They had to turn their faces toward the ranch and Roanoke. Dirk had work to do before he left for the east. So the big car was packed again; the women, in riding breeches and jerseys with handkerchiefs knotted at the throats, helped Katharine were a lemon-yellow sweater, and her old jodhpur breeches were shabby and stained. She sat on a rock, both russet boots stretched out before her, drinking coffee from an enameled cup. Her fair hair was ruffled; there was a deep apricot tinge on her rounded cheeks. The pale girl who had smiled at the eastern train a few weeks ago and who had been recognized in this bronzed Aurora. "Fun! It's been marvellous," she said simply to the blond giant at her feet. "I never in my life had such a glorious time."

"Honestly, do you mean it?" Frank said to her. "You do, because you did this all the time and you're staying forever, aren't you?"

"Oh, I don't know about that!" She was laughing, but some inner terror for an instant darkened her eyes and chilled her smile. It was sweet to be admired, to be the centre of this agreeable group. Why couldn't this be enough for her? Why should her thoughts go harking back to one who had loved her, who had loved her so much that he had flouted her?

Frank came on the homeward drive and the three insisted that she sit beside him in the front seat. Hilda was heavily tactful about this; Katharine didn't mind. They were nice people and they liked her and she liked them. In the atmosphere of admiration and love, she was given to idle chatter—but every now and then he gave her an eloquent look.

He had to give most of his attention to the driving, however. There were traditions, dips in the canon pools, sometimes a sheer drop or a peril on their left without an instant's warning. But Frank had a sure hand on the wheel. Katharine wasn't afraid. They took the journey in leisurely fashion. It was the way of the desert under the stars. Frank had his guitar with him—he'd been in a college orchestra—and he played "Parles moi d'amour" with a good deal of feeling. The stars and the music and the campfire all made an unforgettable scene.

Life would be so simple, Katharine argued with herself, if one could follow the line of least resistance. She might, for example, marry Frank Millard and bear him five children and love him quite unselfishly and make a sort of comic of existence. But she had muddled up her life before she met him. She liked him a lot—he was as likable as a Newfoundlander or a friendly child. But love? Well, she had known that once it hadn't been exactly pleasant. It had been all dizzy heights and clear of it in the future.

All of this she thought as Frank strummed the plaintive music and the smoke of Dirk's and Hilda's cigarettes curled toward the roof of the campfire. Evelyn Vincent was asleep, propped rather uncomfortably against the seat cushions of the car. Presently they all untied their bedding rolls and said yawning good nights. The women had the tent. Dirk and Frank arranged their beds by the fire.

Katharine did not sleep for a long time. A mood of wakefulness was upon her and, for the life of her, sleep would not come. She could see one great, unwinking blue star through the tent flap. Miss Vincent snored, and Hilda stirred uneasily in her sleep.

The music echoed in Katharine's brain. "Speak-to-me-of-love . . ."

After a long time her eyes closed and she breathed easily and quietly. There were tears on her cheeks. No one was moving about when she awoke. Dressing hastily, running her ivory comb through her flyaway curls, she glanced out to see that Frank and his brother lay in the relaxed and rather touching abandon of persons deeply asleep.

She needed exercise, she told herself. Before the sun came up she would have a brief walk. Just as far as that mesquite bush in the middle distance.

She walked along, absorbed in her thoughts. To-morrow she would be back at Silencia; the pleasant, easy life would begin again, with sun-drenched days filled with sketching and music and bridge, and the books in the library of the adobe house. It was not a bad life, but for a young, restless, eager girl it was not every-thing.

She glanced over her shoulder. Perhaps she had better be turning back. Someone would waken and miss her, perhaps be alarmed. But when she looked back she could see nothing of the car or the peaked tent or the sleeping men. Her heart beating a little faster, she whirled, increasing her pace. Her feet, in their russet boots, squeaked on the sand, slipping with every step. Oh, but she'd see them all in a minute. She would hear Frank's hearty laugh and smell the smoke of the breakfast fire and the good scent of boiling coffee.

She walked as quickly as she could, shielding her eyes from the rising sun. That was it. That was it. Certainly she had walked west when she started. Or had she?

Silence and sand and cactus. A gopher that hopped out from the shadow of a bush and stared at her curiously. Silence and a wheeling red ball in the heavens.

Katharine was lost.

Michael went up to the great iron bell that dangled between two redwood posts and pulled the rope vigorously. A dark-skinned girl in a pigmy frock appeared, stroking her crisp apron and smiling at him with a flash of dazzling white teeth.

"A mess Stryker! But she has gone . . ."

His heart sank like lead in his breast. Gone? Gone where?

The dark-haired man did not seem to know. But he would call Miss Daisy Ingram. Miss Daisy would tell the gentlemen.

Michael found himself in a cool, low-ceiled room with white walls and niches in which curious bright figures appeared. Over the polished floor the heels of Miss Daisy came tapping.

"A friend of Miss Katharine's? Well, how very nice." She beamed at the young man. "They've gone to the mountains. A matter of several hundred miles, believe you will wait until they return!"

Michael said, rather grimly: "If you can tell me the way I'll follow them."

NOTES FROM THE THEATRES

Where do they hail from this seemingly endless influx of delectable chorines who decorate the Hollywood musical production? Do the big towns produce this disconcerting abundance of beauty or is it peculiar to the lush soil of the hinterland? A fairly comprehensive inquiry into the private lives of the 73 chorus beauties signed to form the high-kicking background for the antics of Maurice Chevalier in "Folies Bergere," showing on Friday at the King's Theatre, revealed some surprising facts. Dave Gould who staged the dance ensembles for this 20th Century Picture, selected his chorus from more than 600 available candidates. All of them were young, exceptionally beautiful, shapely and talented. The elect seventy-three are the quintessence of beauty drawn from various shades of brown to platinum, brunettes and red-heads. Only thirteen of their number came from big towns. Of these, only five named New York as the city of their origin and the rest were divided among Chicago, Detroit and Los Angeles. The majority of the beauties unblushingly named such obscure hamlets as Parsons, Kansas; Weatherford, Texas; Bluff, Utah; Eagle Rock, California; and Lawton, Oklahoma, as the spots for which they grew to fame. For like Darryl F. Zanuck, the producer of "Folies Bergere," who boasts a "whistle-stop" in the great midwest as his birthplace, they hail largely from "the sticks." Louisiana, Washington, New Jersey and Kansas were next with two each, trailed by New Mexico, Indiana, Michigan, Alabama, Tennessee, Nebraska, Oregon, Iowa, Ohio, Arizona and Georgia with but a single qualifying chorine apiece. The corn belt, obviously, is a surprisingly strong bidder for beauty honours, whereas the South, noted for its beauties, proved weak. Virginia, Florida, Kentucky, the Carolinas, Maryland and Mississippi fall completely of representation. But there's a telling aggregation of right smart girls from down Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana way while old New England cleaves to its usual conservatism, yielding not a single beauty to the chorus of this Joseph M. Schenck production.

sentation for release through United Artists.

"The Best Man Wins" Columbia's "The Best Man Wins," a spectacular, rollicking film starring Edmund Lowe and Jack Holt with Bela Lugosi and Florence Rice in support will be seen from Thursday at the Queen's Theatre. Based on a story by Ben. G. Korn, adapted to the screen by Ethel Hill and Bruce Manning, "The Best Man Wins" tells the exciting tale of two deep-sea divers and their adventurous careers on opposite sides of the law. One becomes a diver for a smuggling ring, the other an officer of the waterfront police. Their meeting underwater in the final sequence is said to be one of the most breathtaking scenes to be seen in pictures. Interpolated in the dramatic theme is the romance rivalry between Lowe and Holt for Miss Florence Rice's favour. The latter, daughter of sports writer Grantland Rice, has been in pictures for only a brief spell, but has progressed remarkably since her debut. Others in the cast are J. Farrell MacDonald, Frank Sheridan, Bradley Page and Mitchell Lewis.

"G Men" Many months were spent in preparation before a camera turned on the First National picture "G Men," a story of the daring exploits of the men of the United States Department of Justice, which is now showing at the Alhambra Theatre. A vast amount of research was necessary to depict effectively the six months' training period through which all recruits go before becoming full-fledged "G Men." In order to assure technical accuracy in the finger-printing and ballistics department, studio called upon Frank J. Conner, head of the criminalistic department of the Los Angeles county sheriff's office to aid in furnishing these details. Gompert obtained finger-printing apparatus, selector devices, magnified photographs of bullets, finger-print comparators, microscopes, ballistics and a mass of other mysterious apparatus employed by the modern criminologist. Experts who visited the sets described them as remarkable examples of a complete criminological laboratory. The hero's part the Department of Justice played in bringing to justice the perpetrators of these crimes is dramatically depicted. The picture is one of the most thrilling dramas ever screened taken from newspaper headlines of the past three years of the battle of rover-ment men against the arch criminals of the country. The all star cast is headed by James Cagney and includes Margaret Lindsay, Ann Dvorak, Robert Armstrong, Barton MacLane, Lloyd Nolan, William Harrigan, Russell Hopton and Edward Pawley. William Keighly directed it from the screen play by Seton I. Miller based on the story by Gregory Rogers. Cagney, Hollywood's most famous bad man, portrays his past roles to acting is said to be the finest in his career. Some critics have gone as far as to say that in "G Men," he has turned in a performance even greater than in the memorable "Public Enemy." Ann Dvorak, who revealed a surprising talent for song and dance, in "Sweet Music," the Warner Bros. musical, has a similar part in this film plus an opportunity to show her dramatic talents.

"Dracula" A strange, weird motion picture that outdoes all previous mysteries of the screen is "Dracula," the startling Universal production which is showing at the Queen's Theatre to-day. It may safely be said that this story is distinctly in a class by itself, and that its subject matter is absolutely unique among film productions. For "Dracula," which was adapted from Bram Stoker's famous novel of the same name, deals with human vampirism, which ancient superstition describes as horrible "undead" creatures who rise from their graves at night. The title role of Count Dracula is played with remarkable effect by Bela Lugosi, who created the same figure as an arresting performance as the sinister vampire who is the central character of the story. Helen Chandler is altogether charming and capable in the principal feminine part, and David Manners, as her fiance, does the type of work which has made him one of the most popular of leading men. Other members of the cast who contribute outstanding characterizations are Edward Van Sloan, Dwight Dillard, Frances Dade, and Herbert Hunter. Van Sloan and Dutton, by the way, are seen in the roles which they created in the stage play, when they appeared in company with Lugosi.

"Girls, Please" Since the famous scene played with Leslie Henson over a bowl of punch in "Fanny Huggins," Sydney Howard, doe-eyed of the new film "Girls, Please," has been known to excel

STUDIO SECURES JUDGMENT

Judgment was delivered by the Pulane Judge, Mr. Justice Lindell, at the Summary Court this morning in the case in which the Melling Studio, of Asia Life Building, claimed $164.50 from the Globe Motion Picture Co. of Aberdeen (H.K.) for work done and material supplied.

His Lordship gave judgment for the plaintiff with costs.

Mr. Peter Sin appeared for the plaintiffs and Mr. F. X. D'Almada for the defendants.

The case for the plaintiffs was that the claim was in respect to photographs taken on behalf of the defendants.

The defence that the money had been paid to one Robert Hall who was an employee of the plaintiff firm.

Giving judgment, His Lordship said: "I am satisfied by the evidence given by the plaintiff that the man Robert Hall was their employee at the material time and had no authority, real or ostensible, to collect payment for the photographs taken by him in his capacity as such employee. The defendants should have been warned by the words printed at the bottom of the bill: 'A separate receipt will be given on payment of this account', and should have demanded such a receipt when they made payment. Had they done that, the true state of affairs would have been disclosed. Their failure to do so has deprived them of all remedy. Judgment for plaintiff for claim with costs."

ARDUOUS SWIM

"We decided to make for Green Island, which was half a mile away and we abandoned 'Mae West' and started off. The tide was running against us and Cootes had a touch of cramp in one foot. Fortunately it soon passed off and we were able to make the shore separately. Meekie, myself and Cootes arriving in that order. We were in the water nearly two hours altogether. 'Meekie' had nothing on at all, whilst Cootes had his underpants and I had a bathing slip. Green Island is just a bare rock and nobody lives there, so we just had to sit together and try and keep warm. It was damn cold as a matter of fact.

"We saw a sampan passing about quarter to six in the morning and hailed it. The sampan people lent Meekie a pair of Chinese trousers to make shore and landed us at Shek-O. From there we got my car and went home!"

OTHER YACHTS DAMAGED

Practically all the other yachts who had earlier been in company with the "Wasp II" also suffered damage.

The U. and I. (Mr. Marshall) lost a jib and cracked a mast, the Norseman (Mr. Nicholson) lost a mizzen mast and mizzen sail, the Luana (Mr. A. L. Shelds) lost a jib and tore her mainsail, the Marie (Col. Dowling) had her mainsail blown away, while G-9 also lost a jib. Those aboard the A-9 had an anxious time and during the height of the storm all donned their life-belts.

The plight of the "Wasp II" was unknown to the other yachts, as she was much behind the others in returning.

Church Wine Poisoned

ITALIAN PRIEST STRICKEN MYSTERIOUS CRIME

(Special to "Telegraph")

Cremona, August 5. The police here are investigating a mysterious crime in the Church of St. Augustine.

Monsignor Stuardi, when celebrating mass, drank a little of the Communion wine and fell to the altar steps terribly burned about the mouth and stomach.

The Vicar, who also tasted the wine, was likewise burned, and an analysis revealed that there was a quantity of sulphuric acid in the goblet.

There is hope of saving Monsignor Stuardi's life and meanwhile the authorities are bending every effort to solve the puzzle.

The trial has just been concluded at Spoleto of a similar case in which the parish priest was poisoned with strychnine and later died. Two accused men received heavy prison sentences.—Reuter Special.

Two Typhoons Or Only One?

POSSIBLE THREAT TO COLONY

Whilst the Manila Observatory reports two typhoons to-day, the Hongkong Observatory adheres to its view that there is only one centre, this being off Swatow, less than 300 miles from Hongkong.

The Manila Observatory, reporting at 8.45 a.m. to-day, states that the typhoon which has formed to the west of the Basil Channel in now situated in about 118 Long, 21 Lat., moving W.N.W. This is north-east of the Pratas, less than 300 miles from Hongkong, and if it continues on its present course it should pass close to the Colony.

Another typhoon, according to the Manila Observatory, is in about 119 Long, 24 Lat., moving west. This position is east of Amoy, which is accordingly threatened.

The acting Director of the Royal Observatory, Mr. B. D. Evans, questioned this morning, doubted whether there would be two separate centres so close together. In his opinion, there is only one centre, situated about 118 Long, 23 Lat., which is south-east of Swatow, within the 300 mile radius from Hongkong. This typhoon is moving very slowly W.N.W. It was possible, stated Mr. Evans, that with the typhoon coming nearer to Hongkong, the No. 1 warning signal might be hoisted later in the day.

AN ADMIRAL'S CHAUFFEUR

DANGEROUS DRIVING CHARGE

Kwok Yuk, driver of private car T216, and chauffeur to Admiral Chan Chak, was summoned before Mr. W. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, for dangerous driving along Stubbs Road on July 11.

The defendant was absent. Inspector Alexander said the defendant used to come to Hongkong for two or three days, and then go back to Canton.

Mr. Schofield adjourned the case sine die.

Several drivers of motor vehicles and owners were summoned for failing to renew their driving licences, and driving unlicensed cars, and fines of $5 each were imposed.

O. E. C. Marton, the local solicitor, was summoned on two counts of failing to renew his driving licence, and driving car No. 2588, which was not duly licensed, in Garden Road.

A representative appeared in Court on behalf of the defendant, and handed a letter from defendant to the Magistrate.

A fine of $5 on each summons was imposed.

OLD TRICK PLAYED

WOMAN LOSES JEWELLERY

Tam Kiu, married woman, had an unfortunate experience when she met a man unknown to her in the street on July 18, and engaged in conversation with him, for, after some time, she took off all her jewellery, and wrapped it in a parcel, and gave it to the man to carry. He later handed her the parcel, but after he had gone, she opened it and found it to contain nothing but paper.

Yesterday, while she was walking near the Naval Dockyard, she saw the same man, and gave chase. He was eventually arrested by Lance Corporal Wright.

Appearing before Mr. W. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, the man, Chan Fuk-ki, unemployed, pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining jewellery by a trick from the complainant, and was sentenced to six months' hard labour. The jewellery consisted of four imitation gold finger rings, a gold bangle and a metal wrist watch.

Inspector J. Fender said that on July 18, the complainant was walking along Queen's Road East, near the Murray Barracks, when she met the defendant, who asked her the way to the Wanchai Market. He then got into conversation with her, and after some time, she took off all her jewellery, and made it into a parcel, which she gave to the defendant to carry. When they parted, defendant handed the parcel back to her, but on opening it she found the jewellery to be missing.

ONE INSTANTLY KILLED

A Chinese residing at Fanling was killed by lightning and another man, his companion, both living in a tenement house, was injured during the heavy thunderstorm last evening, according to Chinese reports.

The two victims were cooking their meal in the kitchen when they were struck by lightning. Cheung Kau, 25, was killed instantly, while his companion, Chan Flu, suffered injuries to his head and had to be admitted to hospital for treatment.

HWAH PENG SAFE

ARRIVED AT SHUAN CHOW ON SUNDAY

The Hwah Peng, the Chinese steamer which was reported missing from Shanghai since she left on July 27, arrived at her destination, Shuan Chow, near Amoy, shortly after noon on Sunday.

This information was received by the local Naval authorities yesterday morning.

The vessel was due to arrive at Shuan Chow on July 29, and is believed to have been forced to shelter from the typhoon which was reported to be in the vicinity. Her failure to report is stated to have been because she does not carry wireless.

For stealing 35 cattle of wolfram ore from No. 21 Nam Chang Street yesterday, Chan Koon-mul, 30, unemployed, was sentenced to six weeks' hard labour by Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning.

Lai Hon, 28, shop foki, was the complainant. Inspector Ellis stated that on Saturday night defendant went to complainant's shop and sold the ore to complainant for $3.20, and as it was too late to go to the country, he stayed the night at the shop. The next morning the ore was found to be missing and defendant had gone. He was later arrested in Canton Road.

POLICEMAN ATTACKED AND SERIOUSLY WOUNDED

Amoy, Aug. 2. The daring theft of a pistol from a policeman on duty in the Chung San Road last Wednesday night during the rain storm, has caused a shock to the public in Amoy. The culprit fled into a lane, and fired when more police chased them.

The policeman was on duty from one to three o'clock in the morning. Rain fell heavily, so he changed his stand to the sidewalk near the Thian Sian Hotel. Three persons came from different directions, and pretended to wait there until the rain was over. One was in foreign dress, while the others were in ordinary clothes. Enquiring their business so late, the policeman was told that they were returning from a banquet given by their friends. When the policeman became suspicious of their behaviour, he was suddenly grasped by two of them round the waist. He fought desperately, and attempted to run across the road, where more policemen were on duty. His pistol was seized and he fell. His assailants stabbed him to prevent him rising, and ran down a lane opposite.

The wounded policeman blew his whistle and chased them down the lane, when the robbers began to fire.

The affair being reported to this Srd. Police Substation, a detachment of armed police was dispatched to give chase, but failed to capture the assailants.

The wounded constable was sent to hospital. He had 12 wounds, one in the chest being dangerous, and his fingers were also cut during the struggle.
